Bank robbers captured

Two men were arrested shortly after 11 a.m. today about an hour after a robbery at the Bank of Sikeston Motor Bank, 120 S. Main St.

The men were taken into custody after their car was spotted parked in the Sikeston High School parking lot on Pine Street by Highway Patrol Sgt. A. E. "Bud" Mills.

The money taken in the robbery and the gun used were recovered in the car.

Sikeston Public Safety Department officials did not immediately identify either man, although both are believed to be from Illinois. One man was being held at the department headquarters, and officers said he is 33 years old and gave a Cairo address.

The second man was taken to the highway patrol Troop E satellite headquarters on Edwards Street late this morning.

One of the two men allegedly entered the bank at 10 a.m., where he displayed a small-caliber handgun and demanded money from a teller.

Ural Coppage, assistant cashier, put the money in a small travel bag as the man demanded. She said she did not see a gun.

But loan officer Bob Couch told public safety officers he saw a small handgun.

The man was followed by a Daily Standard advertising salesman as he fled on foot toward the Travelodge Motel on East Malone Avenue, where he got into a white station wagon driven by another man.

The robber forced Couch to accompany him out of the bank, but left him as soon as they were outside.

Mills spotted the men after deciding to make one last check of the high school parking lot.

Public Safety Dispatcher Ed Speakman said he did not know why the men were parked in the parking lot, unless they thought they could hide there.

The bank robbery may be the first in Sikeston's history. Edward Matthews, president of Bank of Sikeston, said the bank had never been robbed before to his knowledge and he knew of no other bank robberies in town.

Fire destroys building

Firemen from Sikeston and Miner fought a fire Wednesday night which destroyed a large sheet metal building at the Holyfield Flying Service airport northeast of Sikeston. The building formerly housed a metal plating firm. The fire broke out about 8 p.m. and burned for almost two hours. Miner firemen were called back to the scene at 11 p.m. when the fire flared up.

Dexter firm submits low bid on Sikeston Sheltered Workshop

Construction is expected to begin today or Friday on a new concrete block building to house the Community Sheltered Workshop, general manager B. W. Gunn said today.

Bids were opened Wednesday night in Benton in a joint meeting of the Sikeston and Scott County workshop boards.

Brown Construction Co. of Dexter submitted the low bid of $398,000. Other bidders were Boyer Construction, Ryan Construction, M. D. Limbaugh Construction and Sides Construction companies of Sikeston.

The 21,000- square foot building will be built on five acres of land just north of the steam plant on North West Street. Construction should be completed within five months.

The building will house seven workrooms, three offices, a bay area, four rest rooms, a cafeteria, reception area and conference room.

Gunn said the Sikeston facility and the Cape Girardeau facility will be the two most modern workshops in the state.

The building will be air-conditioned with the exception of a 10,000- square foot bay area which will be cooled by large fans. The bay area will be used for constructing wooden pallets and storage.

Gunn said all lending institutions in the county have formed a pool to provide funds for the construction. First National Bank of Sikeston will make the actual loan.

The building will be repaid by a one-mill tax approved by Scott County voters on April 1, 1975.

Gunn said the joint effort was one of the largest cooperative efforts ever undertaken by Scott county lending institutions.

The sheltered workshop employs 100 handicapped persons who manufacture a variety of products for sale. The workshop is currently located in an old barracks building at Sikeston Memorial Airport.

The new structure will allow the workshop to expand to 150 persons, Gunn said.

Regional center pool dedicated

A dedication ceremony was conducted Wednesday for the new swimming pool at the Sikeston Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled, 1 Plaza Drive.

The pool was financed by contributions given largely by the Sikeston Citizens Band Radio Club, the Sikeston Jaycees and other civic organizations.

Located on the north side of the regional center building, the pool was constructed by Alan Craig Swim System. The pool dimensions are 20 by 40 feet with three feet of water in the shallow end and five feet at the deep end.

Representing the Sikeston CB Club at the dedication ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Schoch, Mr. and Mrs. Jackie Cecil, Mr. and Mrs. Slim Phillips, Shelby Gordon, club president Bill and Joe Marsh.

Representing the Sikeston Association for Retarded Citizens and the Sikeston CB Club were Mildred Marks and Lee Marks. Representing the Sikeston Jaycees was Stephen Taylor, and representatives of the Sikeston Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled were Linda Sloan and Gary Smith, activity therapist. Present in behalf of the Scott-Mississippi- New Madrid Counties United Cerebral Palsy chapter were Helen Shelton and Jane Minner.

Runaway tractor smashes trailer

This tractor being auctioned at Hale Auction Company, Highway 62 East, jumped into gear with the engine running, according to workmen at the auction company. The tractor knocked down a chain-link fence, crossed Highway 62, jumped the railroad tracks, took off across a field, made another turn, traveling behind Stewart Steel Company, jumped another ditch, and finally came to rest in the rear of Richard Forbey's mobile home, about a quarter mile away from the auction company. All of this was without benefit of a driver. Forbey said he had to spend the night in his camper trailer, because of the damage done to his bedroom.

Stealing charges expected today

NEW MADRID — Felonious stealing charges will be filed today in New Madrid County Magistrate Court against Jerry William Kelly, 35, of Sikeston and Ricky Lynn Abney, 18, of Lilbourn, stemming from the theft Wednesday night of an electric motor from the cargo of a United Parcel Service truck.

New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Willis "Bo" Wingo and highway patrol officers arrested the pair at Cross Truck Stop on Highway 61 north of New Madrid at 9:30 p.m. Kelly, who has been a UPS driver more than 10 years, allegedly took the motor from the truck and passed it to Abney, an employe of the truck stop, according to Wingo.

Wingo said Kelly was an interstate driver for UPS and was en route to St. Louis with a sealed cargo. Company officials have been checking similar thefts over a period of nine months, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation is expected to hold the pair for further investigation.

Oran to get EPA grant

ORAN — Tenth District Rep. Bill D. Burlison has announced that the Environmental Protection Agency has awarded an $8,100 grant to the city of Oran for use in the preparation of a wastewater treatment works facility plan including an infiltration- inflow analysis.

The Cape Girardeau congressman noted that the grant was made under the waste treatment works program of the Environmental Protection Agency. The total cost of the project is estimated at $10,800.

SOVIET NAVAL OBJECTIVES

When in the past a country with few overseas financial or colonial interests has embarked on the building of a considerable fleet, the true aims of the ships concerned have proved to be not only protection of the homeland and the sea lines of communication which run to it but also aggressive activities designed to support national policy."

So speaks the new 1976-77 edition of Jane's Fighting ships in its comments on the Soviet naval building program. "Admiral Gorshkov has made it quite clear that he considers the fleet which he commands as an essential element of the political advance of his country," Jane's adds.

The foreword to the latest edition of Jane's stresses the great reliance of NATO nations on ocean trade, pointing out that at any one time there are over 4,000 merchant ships plying between their ports in addition to some 3,000 ships within those ports. Oil comes to these nations in tankers, of which 200 are daily at sea in the Indian Ocean. He who has the capacity to interrupt this commerce will be in a commanding position to achieve his ends, even though no shot or torpedo is ever fired. This seems to be the Soviet objective as they establish naval bases or friendly havens in such diverse places as Cuba, North Africa, Guinea, Somalia, and Aden. Meanwhile, their squadrons sail into all the waters of the world.

With one Soviet carrier now operational, a second nearly so, and two more building, it is unmistakably evident that Russia is no longer prepared to concede U.S. naval superiority in any category of ship. The U.S. naval mission of protecting our overseas supply lines and providng for the maritime support of our far flung allies is cearly in jeopardy.

Honest debate may flourish over just what mix of ships we need, but there can be no doubt that we face a serious and growing naval challenge that must be fully met if we are to maintain our credibility and deterrence.

"Then," he shouted with glee, "Hot dog! I've shot a deer."

Art Buchwald

THE POP SCULPTOR

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed he wasn't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns.)

One day the Canadian authorities refused to allow 80 wooden crates, which looked like cartons of Brillo soap pads, Kellogg's corn flakes and Mott's apple juice, to go through customs as works of art. The cartons, painted by American pop artist Andy Warhol, were not, said the Candadians, works of art but merchandise, and subject to $4,000 duty.

I think the Canadians are all wet. A few days after the incident in Canada, I went down to the supermarket to buy some groceries for my wife. On the way home I stopped in at an art gallery where they were holding a pop art exhibit. Unfortunately, the carton of groceries got heavy, and I left them on the floor.

Then, being so moved by what I saw, I left the gallery and went home.

"Where are the groceries?" my wife demanded.

"Oh, my gosh," I cried, "I left them at the art gallery."

"Well, you'd better get them if you want any supper tonight."

I rushed back to the gallery, but I was too late. The groceries had been awarded first prize in the show.

"We've been looking all over for you," the gallery owner said. "Why didn't you sign your work of art?"

"It's not a work of art. It's my dinner for tonight."

The gallery roared with appreciative laughter. "He's not only a great sculptor, but he has humor as well," a judge said.

"You can see that in his work," another judge added. "Notice how the bottle of Heinz catsup is leaning against the can of Campbell's pork and beans."

I'll never know how he was inspired to put the Ritz crackers on top of the can of Crisco," a lady said to her escort.

"It's pure genius," the escort replied. "Notice the way the Del Monte can of peaches is lying on its side. Even Warhol wouldn't have gone that far."

"I think the thing that really won the prize for him was the manner in which he crushed the Sara Lee cheesecake on the bottom of the box."

"It makes Picasso look sick."

"Look," I said, "I'm very grateful for all these honors, but my wife is waiting for this stuff and I have to get it home."

"Get it home?" the gallery owner said in amazement. "I've just sold it to that couple over there for $1,500."

"The groceries cost me only $18," I replied.

"It isn't the groceries. It's what you did with them. You have managed to put more meaning into a box of Rinso than Rodin put into 'The Thinker.' Nobody will ever be able to look at a can of Franco-American spaghetti without thinking of you. You have said with this bag of groceries in one evening what Rembrandt tried to say in 1,000 paintings."

I blushed modestly and accepted his check. That night I took my wife out to dinner, and the next day I went back to the supermarket and bought another bag of groceries, much more expensive than the previous ones, which I immediately took to the gallery.

But the reviews were lousy. "Success has gone to his head," said Washington's leading art critics. "Where once he was able to produce simple jars of cat food and peanut butter in a wild, reckless, I-don't-give-a-damn-manner, he is now serving up elegant cans of mushrooms and mock turtle soup. The famous touch is gone and all that is left is a hodgepodge of tasteless groceries."

". . . so we'll begin the course with simple, obscure foreign codes and work up to campaign speeches."

AFTER MAO...

Mao Tse-tung is dead, and the great question that now hangs over China is whether the Communists have succeeded where all the emperors failed—in creating a system that provides for the orderly transfer of power from one ruler to another.

The question may not be answered for many years, however.

The upheavals that periodically racked China occurred when a challenger came forward to wrest the "mandate of heaven" away from an aging, faltering dynasty and to establish a new one. Within dynasties, or families, emperors usually succeeded one another peacefully.

If communism has truly been established as one more dynasty in the long list of those that have ruled over what has probably always been the most populous and least-known country in the world, then the calm that now prevails in China will continue indefinitely. So will Mao's "thoughts" and so will the developing Sino-American relations that began with President Nixon's visit to Peking in 1972.

This does not mean, of course, that there may not be bitter power struggles among Mao's heirs or would-be heirs behind the walls of Peking's Forbidden City.

But no matter who eventually emerges as first among the equals who direct China's destiny, the evidence overwhelmingly suggests that the Communist order has come to stay.

For the first time in 4,000 years, famine is no longer the great scourge of China. To make a nation of more than 800 million people—a nation that for most of this century has been at war either with itself or with an invader—self-sufficient in agriculture in less than 20 years is possibly the most dramatic achievement in all of China's history.

Yet the world still does not know the full story of the "Cultural Revolution" of the late 1960s, which was inspired by Mao in order to purge the Chinese revolution of "counterrevolutionary" trends he saw.

Chinese youth, particularly the Red Guards, nearly got out of hand. Even today, there is some question as to how complete Peking's rule is over the hinterland. As so often before in China's past, provincial military leaders seem to enjoy varying degrees of autonomy and independence from the central government.

Without the unifying influence of Mao Tse-tung, a repetition of a phenomenon of such elemental fury as the Cultural Revolution could very well set China back a hundred years as a world power. China's leaders, will certainly not permit this to happen.

In the meantime, Mao Tse-tuhg in death has truly achieved the status of godhead to which he was very nearly elevated in life. Never have the emotions of the China's teeming millions been so completely focused on one man.

Again, China's new leaders will undoubtedly take steps to insure that this highly useful Mao-worship continues. We will not likely wittness anything like a "de-Maoization" process in China.

It will remain for some future generation of Chinese, a generation free to choose the gods it worships, to accord Mao Tse-tung his rightful place in China's history and to balance the deaths of millions, which Mao Tse-tung has been charged with causing, against his role in helping China secure her rightful place in the family of nations.

TWO SIDES TO THIS

Attorney General Danforth advocates a constitutional amendment that would limit members of the U.S. Senate and Congress to 12 years in office.

It has about as much chance of getting through Congress as the proverbial snowball in Hades, but it's going to sound good to people who are tired of some of the long-termers and their actions at Washington. Like Danforth, many claim such a term limitation would result in needed reforms in Congress, eliminate those who have stayed so long they have lost touch with the people, inject fresh ideas and procedures into our highest law making body.

There is another side though. It would be difficult to persuade many Missourians in this area that the late Congressman Cannon stayed too long, or that Sen. Symington has been in Washington long enough to outlive his full usefulness. Neither could they be convinced that Bill Hungate, who is voluntarily retiring, as is Symington, has lost touch with those of us back home, or has become ineffective.

From personal experience, those of us in the Ninth District know that these men have become increasingly helpful to all of us the longer they remained in Washington. They are only a few of the examples that could be given.

THE SHOT THAT LAUNCHED OUR BICENTENNIAL

The shot that launched the Bicentennial was fired over two hundred years ago, first at Lexington and then at Concord, and the Revolutionary War was begun. From 1775, the undisputed right of the colonials to implement the independence they had declared on July 4, 1776, finally was victorious with the defeat of the British at Yorktown in 1781.

One wonders if the rugged individualists who opposed the tyranny of their King and motherland had any idea of the destiny that would result, in the United States and the world, from their actions.

They were the catalyst for what would become the most enlightened, democratic and awe-inspiring nation in the world. They were the inspiration for people everywhere, from the time of the French Revolution to the present. They were the precursors of a magnificent American heritage.

The shot heard round the world was not fired lightly. Dissatisfaction with the threats from London, primarily related to taxation without representation, had been festering for some years. On Oct. 11, 1774, the first Provincial Congress assembled in Concord to sever the bonds of the colony from the Crown. Under the guidance of John Hancock, the first president, the congress declared Americans were "entitled to life, liberty and the means of sustenance, by the grace of Heaven and without the King's leave."

The farmers of Middlesex County, Mass., stored arms and supplies that winter. Finally, Gen. Thomas Gage, the military governor of the province, dispensed troops to destroy the arms and supplies, leading to the famous ride of Paul Revere (and William Dawes, later joined by Dr. Samuel Prescott) to warn the residents of Lexington and Concord.

At dawn on April 19, 1775, about 130 Minutemen heard Captain John Parker declare, "Stand your ground! Don't fire unless fired upon! But if they mean to have a war, let it begin here!" And so it did, as the 700 British troops fired upon the Minutemen, as they were obeying the order to disperse, and killed eight of them. The troops cheered and moved on to Concord, where they set fire to the town as 400 colonials watched from a nearby hill. The patriots marched toward the British, with the order again given not to fire unless fired upon.

The British fired a volley, killing two men. Within minutes the British were fighting in retreat the full 20 miles back to Boston. The course of history was irrevocably changed.

In these days of wavering purpose, Americans can be no better assuaged than by reexamining the roots of American liberty and self-identity.

FOR THE PEOPLE BY THE PEOPLE

As of right now, it appears that the American people are seriously considering a change in leadership in Washington. Republicans, with the help of some cross-over Democrats, gave a majority vote to Ronald Reagan in three primaries. This followed a great Reagan victory in Texas. On the Democratic side, Jimmy Carter continues with his landslide victories. The candidates that have and are dropping out are the ones who have already done some time in the legislative branch of our government. There's no doubt that the people want someone who is new to the ways of Washington. We're hoping this trend continues for most any kind of change would be for the best whether it be a peanut farmer or an actor. At least we could hear some fresh ideas. This is what Democracy is all about. If you don't like what you have at the head of our government, you can make a change every four years. Sometimes you can get it done in less time. It's high time we get back to a government for the people and by the people.

LET'S NOT FORGET NIXON

REPORTERS covering President Ford's campaign have been noting for some time that he had expunged the name of former President Nixon from his remaks in the same manner he had eliminated the word detente.

He readily referred to such former presidents as Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower and Lyndon Johnson by their names. But all his references to Nixon were as "my predecessor" or "the former president."

Thursday they asked the President why he used such oblique reference.

"I do it deliberately," the President said.

"The Nixon period was an unfortunate era, certainly the period that took place after 1971 or 1973 or so."

He added that he thought it better "not to remind ourselves of that unfortunate period.

"I think the more that all of us forget it, the better," he told the news conference.

Not so.

It will serve no good purpose to debate the events of that period endlessly, it is true, and no one should recommend that.

But the people of this nation never should forget what happened during that period, either. It was a period which will go down in history as one of great significance. It was a period in which the nation came very close to losing some of its fundamental rights and fortunately saw the system prevail over those who would have subverted it. That is well worth remembering.

Making Richard Nixon a "nonperson" will not—and should not—cause the people to forget.

What Price Glory?

FBI, under Kelley, broke records in Civil Rights, Crime Syndicate Convictions

WASHINGTON— During my recent travels I conversed with some of the most brilliant, pragmatic, iron-nerved James Bond types specializing in counter-intelligence and anti-terrorist operations for their government. In one famed continental capital I was their guest. To my utter delight I learned they had one of the best wine cellars abroad.

Believe me, the faith their nation places in them is justified, their records some day will show. Obviously with their truly meager wages they aren't buying the vintages.

So I was startled on returning home to note a headline reading "Director of FBI Target of Inquiry" because he had permitted (actually his late wife did) the bureau's exhibit section to use an estimated $40 worth of lumber to put up a set of curtain valances in his new apartment.

Director Clarence Kelley, now 64, a deacon of the Christian church and like Gov. Carter, who wants him fired, a former Sunday school teacher, wouldn't misappropriate a 13-cent stamp.

Actually U.S. Secretary of the Treasury William Simon, who directs the Secret Service, tells me there was no more practical or less expensive fashion in which to build these valances. Literally Director Kelley saved -- not wasted-- the government money, manpower and security.

Kelley won't tell the story. It's simpler to write a $335 check and forget it -- if President Ford's political opponents permit. Here's what Bill Simon told me the other day when I asked him to tell me, as the cabinet member in charge of the Secret Service, if he would have fired Kelley had the FBI chief been under his jurisdiction instead of Atty. Gen. Levi's.

"No I most certainly wouldn't. I think ... you'll find it was $35 for some plywood for a valance ... in his apartment in Washington.

"Now let's look at a side of this that hasn't been looked at ... For $35 worth of plywood, here is the director of the FBI ... you know we're living in a very dangerous world and we do have enemies and adversaries. Can you imagine how many people would love to have the residence of the director of the FBI bugged?

"Can you imagine how easy it would be to bug the plywood ... that would go into the valances, if indeed it were done commercially. At the very least we would have to have FBI agents go down and purchase the lumber, guard his apartment while it was being installed. And inspect the plywood too. How much ... would that cost if indeed the government opted to do it that way?"

Then I asked him if the FBI would have to rescan Kelley's apartment if it had been decorated by a commercial carpenter.

Said Simon: "Sure. My office is constantly gone over when (I) have a visitor. One never knows whether a detecting device has been left."

It seems to me the question of Kelley's receiving gifts, such as a $105 easy chair, an $84 clock or a $95 walnut table, from his staff, isn't any more "illegal" than all the persoanl favors done by Secret Service agents bodyguarding the presidential candidates. That's political nitpicking.

Point is -- what of the FBI's total work? Look at the record.

During fiscal 1975, the bureau's civil rights fight was one of quality and quantity. In this year, the FBI, according to its documents, handled 7,946 cases within the civil rights criminal statutes. Further, there were another 1,238 cases of alleged discrimination in housing; another 1,477 cases under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibiting discrimination in employment, education, public facilities and places of public accommodation.

Effectiveness in these fields doesn't spring from some civil service attorney researching the record. It takes field work -- often dangerous. In bombing attacks, for example.

And there is a vast area of white-collar crime into which the FBI has recently thrown special "desks." These squads now are piercing Medicaid and Social Security and welfare fraud – thus aiding the aged and the poor. The battle is on against vast thievery and forging of securities on which many depend for old age income.

And if that's of no interest to the scalp hunters, what of the FBI's attack on organized crime? What of the investigation, indictment and conviction of such tough dons as Kansas City's Nick Civella, Detroit's Tony Zerilli and St. Louis syndicate power Tony Giardano? Most of these needed only to dial a phone to get action from "controlled" unions.

In all there were 1,417 convictions of racketeers. By year's end (June 30, 1975) there were 1,800 alleged gangsters in the court pipelines. Not bad. Fair return on $40 (or $35) worth of valances.

It's like President Lincoln said when there were complaints that Gen. Grant was a heavy drinker. Mr. Lincoln asked what Grant's brand was. He wanted to rush it to his other generals.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ford's Aid to NYC; Costly Delay

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Ford made a billion-dollar mistake when he delayed federal aid to New York City last year.

Ford first denied all aid to the financially strapped city. Later he did an about-face and allowed the federal government to guarantee the city's debts.

But in the interim, the uncertainty caused by New York's shaky financial position drove interest rates up for other cities. The higher interest rates cost cities like Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit a whopping total of $1.4 billion.

These are the findings of the House Monetary Affairs subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D.-N.Y. The subcommittee report also charges that the Ford administration grossly miscalculated the nationwide effects of a New York City default.

For example, a September 1975 internal memo from Treasury Undersecretary Edwin Yeo to his boss, William Simon, reported that only 104 American banks held significant amounts of New York City debt obligations.

Based on those figures, Ford administration officials concluded that a New York bankruptcy would not cause havoc among the nation's financial institutions. But Rosenthal's subcommittee challenged the figures and demanded a new survey.

The poll first revealed that 546 banks actually held significant amounts of New York notes. Further checking showed that a total of 954 banks would be left holding the bag if New York went under.

The Treasury had underestimated the impact of a New York City default on American banks by 900 per cent. A default, the study concludes, could have caused an economic disaster for the nation.

Fortunately, Ford changed his mind. But not before it cost other urban borrowers more than a billion dollars.

ETHNIC POLITICS: The Republican National Committee has taken a leaf from Richard Nixon's 1972 campaign notebook and dispatched fund-raising letters to Spanish-American federal employes and contractors.

In a dear "amigos" letter, the chairman of the Republican Hispanic Assembly, Ben Fernandez, urged attendance at a testimonial dinner for Spanish-Americans in the Ford administration. Fernandez asked for a minimum contribution of $30. The message was clear to Spanish-American federal employes and contractors: If they want to protect their jobs, they had better cough up.

A spokesman for the GOP Hispanic Assembly said he saw no impropriety in the solicitations.

Italian-Americans, meanwhile, have complained that they are being ignored by Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter.

In a letter to Carter's New York headquarters, officers of the Italian-American Committee griped that the Democrat had gone out of his way to meet with several other ethnic groups during the party's recent convention, but had blithely bypassed them.

There are 25 million Americans with blood ties to Italy, the letter states, and many "have severe problems with housing, educational opportunity, jobs and promotional opportunity." But Carter, the Italian-Americans charged, seems to lack an "understanding of the problems and issues of ethnics."

Within a day after we inquired about the letter at Carter headquarters, the Italian-Americans received word that the presidential candidate would be happy to meet with them in New York.

STRETCHED "BOOTS": Rep. Charles Diggs, D.-Mich., who heads the House District of Columbia Committee, habitually lays down the law to city officials. But he hasn't hesitated to bend the law to his own purposes.

Diggs left an official reception last year and found a police "boot" locked to the wheel of his automobile. The legislator, who oversees police pay and operations, was "astonished," he told us.

He assumed the ticketing officer had not noticed his congressional tags. When they discovered who he was, the police obligingly unlocked the congressman's wheels.

Diggs admitted to us that he had been ticketed "three or four times" but had ignored the tickets because he was on "official business." Our sources say Diggs has been written up far more times than that.

FTC CONFLICT: You might say that former Federal Trade Commission public relations man Art Amolsch likes to have his cake and eat it too.

After leaving the FTC, Amolsch set up a consulting firm for companies who "want to avoid problems with the Federal Trade Commission." Soon afterward, he accepted an offer to become a part-time consultant to the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The FTC job was scuttled, however, when the agency's lawyers got a look at the promotional mailing Amolsch sent out for his new firm.

Amolsch told us that "I don't think it's a conflict of interest although I can see how it would look that way."

SOVIET NAVAL OBJECTIVES

When in the past a country with few overseas financial or colonial interests has embarked on the building of a considerable fleet, the true aims of the ships concerned have proved to be not only protection of the homeland and the sea lines of communication which run to it but also aggressive activities designed to support national policy."

So speaks the new 1976-77 edition of Jane's Fighting ships in its comments on the Soviet naval building program. "Admiral Gorshkov has made it quite clear that he considers the fleet which he commands as an essential element of the political advance of his country," Jane's adds.

The foreword to the latest edition of Jane's stresses the great reliance of NATO nations on ocean trade, pointing out that at any one time there are over 4,000 merchant ships plying between their ports in addition to some 3,000 ships within those ports. Oil comes to these nations in tankers, of which 200 are daily at sea in the Indian Ocean. He who has the capacity to interrupt this commerce will be in a commanding position to achieve his ends, even though no shot or torpedo is ever fired. This seems to be the Soviet objective as they establish naval bases or friendly havens in such diverse places as Cuba, North Africa, Guinea, Somalia, and Aden. Meanwhile, their squadrons sail into all the waters of the world.

With one Soviet carrier now operational, a second nearly so, and two more building, it is unmistakably evident that Russia is no longer prepared to concede U.S. naval superiority in any category of ship. The U.S. naval mission of protecting our overseas supply lines and providng for the maritime support of our far flung allies is cearly in jeopardy.

Honest debate may flourish over just what mix of ships we need, but there can be no doubt that we face a serious and growing naval challenge that must be fully met if we are to maintain our credibility and deterrence.

AFTER MAO...

Mao Tse-tung is dead, and the great question that now hangs over China is whether the Communists have succeeded where all the emperors failed—in creating a system that provides for the orderly transfer of power from one ruler to another.

The question may not be answered for many years, however.

The upheavals that periodically racked China occurred when a challenger came forward to wrest the "mandate of heaven" away from an aging, faltering dynasty and to establish a new one. Within dynasties, or families, emperors usually succeeded one another peacefully.

If communism has truly been established as one more dynasty in the long list of those that have ruled over what has probably always been the most populous and least-known country in the world, then the calm that now prevails in China will continue indefinitely. So will Mao's "thoughts" and so will the developing Sino-American relations that began with President Nixon's visit to Peking in 1972.

This does not mean, of course, that there may not be bitter power struggles among Mao's heirs or would-be heirs behind the walls of Peking's Forbidden City.

But no matter who eventually emerges as first among the equals who direct China's destiny, the evidence overwhelmingly suggests that the Communist order has come to stay.

For the first time in 4,000 years, famine is no longer the great scourge of China. To make a nation of more than 800 million people—a nation that for most of this century has been at war either with itself or with an invader—self-sufficient in agriculture in less than 20 years is possibly the most dramatic achievement in all of China's history.

Yet the world still does not know the full story of the "Cultural Revolution" of the late 1960s, which was inspired by Mao in order to purge the Chinese revolution of "counterrevolutionary" trends he saw.

Chinese youth, particularly the Red Guards, nearly got out of hand. Even today, there is some question as to how complete Peking's rule is over the hinterland. As so often before in China's past, provincial military leaders seem to enjoy varying degrees of autonomy and independence from the central government.

Without the unifying influence of Mao Tse-tung, a repetition of a phenomenon of such elemental fury as the Cultural Revolution could very well set China back a hundred years as a world power. China's leaders, will certainly not permit this to happen.

In the meantime, Mao Tse-tuhg in death has truly achieved the status of godhead to which he was very nearly elevated in life. Never have the emotions of the China's teeming millions been so completely focused on one man.

Again, China's new leaders will undoubtedly take steps to insure that this highly useful Mao-worship continues. We will not likely wittness anything like a "de-Maoization" process in China.

It will remain for some future generation of Chinese, a generation free to choose the gods it worships, to accord Mao Tse-tung his rightful place in China's history and to balance the deaths of millions, which Mao Tse-tung has been charged with causing, against his role in helping China secure her rightful place in the family of nations.

TWO SIDES TO THIS

Attorney General Danforth advocates a constitutional amendment that would limit members of the U.S. Senate and Congress to 12 years in office.

It has about as much chance of getting through Congress as the proverbial snowball in Hades, but it's going to sound good to people who are tired of some of the long-termers and their actions at Washington. Like Danforth, many claim such a term limitation would result in needed reforms in Congress, eliminate those who have stayed so long they have lost touch with the people, inject fresh ideas and procedures into our highest law making body.

There is another side though. It would be difficult to persuade many Missourians in this area that the late Congressman Cannon stayed too long, or that Sen. Symington has been in Washington long enough to outlive his full usefulness. Neither could they be convinced that Bill Hungate, who is voluntarily retiring, as is Symington, has lost touch with those of us back home, or has become ineffective.

From personal experience, those of us in the Ninth District know that these men have become increasingly helpful to all of us the longer they remained in Washington. They are only a few of the examples that could be given.

THE SHOT THAT LAUNCHED OUR BICENTENNIAL

The shot that launched the Bicentennial was fired over two hundred years ago, first at Lexington and then at Concord, and the Revolutionary War was begun. From 1775, the undisputed right of the colonials to implement the independence they had declared on July 4, 1776, finally was victorious with the defeat of the British at Yorktown in 1781.

One wonders if the rugged individualists who opposed the tyranny of their King and motherland had any idea of the destiny that would result, in the United States and the world, from their actions.

Art Buchwald

THE POP SCULPTOR

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed he wasn't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns.)

One *day the Canadian authorities refused to allow 80 wooden crates, which looked like cartons of Brillo soap pads, Kellogg's corn flakes and Mott's apple juice, to go through customs as works of art. The cartons, painted by American pop artist Andy Warhol, were not, said the Candadians, works of art but merchandise, and subject to $4,000 duty.

I think the Canadians are all wet. A few days after the incident in Canada, I went down to the supermarket to buy some groceries for my wife. On the way home I stopped in at an art gallery where they were holding a pop art exhibit. Unfortunately, the carton of groceries got heavy, and I left them on the floor.

Then, being so moved by what I saw, I left the gallery and went home.

"Where are the groceries?" my wife demanded.

"Oh, my gosh," I cried, "I left them at the art gallery."

"Well, you'd better get them if you want any supper tonight."

I rushed back to the gallery, but I was too late. The groceries had been awarded first prize in the show.

"We've been looking all over for you," the gallery owner said. "Why didn't you sign your work of art?"

"It's not a work of art. It's my dinner for tonight."

The gallery roared with appreciative laughter. "He's not only a great sculptor, but he has humor as well," a judge said.

"You can see that in his work," another judge added. "Notice how the bottle of Heinz catsup is leaning against the can of Campbell's pork and beans."

I'll never know how he was inspired to put the Ritz crackers on top of the can of Crisco," a lady said to her escort.

"It's pure genius," the escort replied. "Notice the way the Del Monte can of peaches is lying on its side. Even Warhol wouldn't have gone that far."

"I think the thing that really won the prize for him was the manner in which he crushed the Sara Lee cheesecake on the bottom of the box."

"It makes Picasso look sick."

"Look," I said, "I'm very grateful for all these honors, but my wife is waiting for this stuff and I have to get it home."

"Get it home?" the gallery owner said in amazement. "I've just sold it to that couple over there for $1,500."

"The groceries cost me only $18," I replied.

"It isn't the groceries. It's what you did with them. You have managed to put more meaning into a box of Rinso than Rodin put into 'The Thinker.' Nobody will ever be able to look at a can of Franco-American spaghetti without thinking of you. You have said with this bag of groceries in one evening what Rembrandt tried to say in 1,000 paintings."

I blushed modestly and accepted his check. That night I took my wife out to dinner, and the next day I went back to the supermarket and bought another bag of groceries, much more expensive than the previous ones, which I immediately took to the gallery.

But the reviews were lousy. "Success has gone to his head," said Washington's leading art critics. "Where once he was able to produce simple jars of cat food and peanut butter in a wild, reckless, I-don't-give-a-damn-manner, he is now serving up elegant cans of mushrooms and mock turtle soup. The famous touch is gone and all that is left is a hodgepodge of tasteless groceries."

"Can you imagine how easy it would be to bug the plywood ... that would go into the valances, if indeed it were done commercially. At the very least we would have to have FBI agents go down and purchase the lumber, guard his apartment while it was being installed. And inspect the plywood too. How much ... would that cost if indeed the government opted to do it that way?"

Then I asked him if the FBI would have to rescan Kelley's apartment if it had been decorated by a commercial carpenter.

Said Simon: "Sure. My office is constantly gone over when (I) have a visitor. One never knows whether a detecting device has been left."

It seems to me the question of Kelley's receiving gifts, such as a $105 easy chair, an $84 clock or a $95 walnut table, from his staff, isn't any more "illegal" than all the persoanl favors done by Secret Service agents bodyguarding the presidential candidates. That's political nitpicking.

Point is -- what of the FBI's total work? Look at the record.

During fiscal 1975, the bureau's civil rights fight was one of quality and quantity. In this year, the FBI, according to its documents, handled 7,946 cases within the civil rights criminal statutes. Further, there were another 1,238 cases of alleged discrimination in housing; another 1,477 cases under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibiting discrimination in employment, education, public facilities and places of public accommodation.

Effectiveness in these fields doesn't spring from some civil service attorney researching the record. It takes field work -- often dangerous. In bombing attacks, for example.

And there is a vast area of white-collar crime into which the FBI has recently thrown special "desks." These squads now are piercing Medicaid and Social Security and welfare fraud – thus aiding the aged and the poor. The battle is on against vast thievery and forging of securities on which many depend for old age income.

And if that's of no interest to the scalp hunters, what of the FBI's attack on organized crime? What of the investigation, indictment and conviction of such tough dons as Kansas City's Nick Civella, Detroit's Tony Zerilli and St. Louis syndicate power Tony Giardano? Most of these needed only to dial a phone to get action from "controlled" unions.

In all there were 1,417 convictions of racketeers. By year's end (June 30, 1975) there were 1,800 alleged gangsters in the court pipelines. Not bad. Fair return on $40 (or $35) worth of valances.

It's like President Lincoln said when there were complaints that Gen. Grant was a heavy drinker. Mr. Lincoln asked what Grant's brand was. He wanted to rush it to his other generals.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ford's Aid to NYC; Costly Delay

by Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Ford made a billion-dollar mistake when he delayed federal aid to New York City last year.

Ford first denied all aid to the financially strapped city. Later he did an about-face and allowed the federal government to guarantee the city's debts.

But in the interim, the uncertainty caused by New York's shaky financial position drove interest rates up for other cities. The higher interest rates cost cities like Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit a whopping total of $1.4 billion.

These are the findings of the House Monetary Affairs subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Ben Rosenthal, D.-N.Y. The subcommittee report also charges that the Ford administration grossly miscalculated the nationwide effects of a New York City default.

For example, a September 1975 internal memo from Treasury Undersecretary Edwin Yeo to his boss, William Simon, reported that only 104 American banks held significant amounts of New York City debt obligations.

Based on those figures, Ford administration officials concluded that a New York bankruptcy would not cause havoc among the nation's financial institutions. But Rosenthal's subcommittee challenged the figures and demanded a new survey.

The poll first revealed that 546 banks actually held significant amounts of New York notes. Further checking showed that a total of 954 banks would be left holding the bag if New York went under.

The Treasury had underestimated the impact of a New York City default on American banks by 900 per cent. A default, the study concludes, could have caused an economic disaster for the nation.

Fortunately, Ford changed his mind. But not before it cost other urban borrowers more than a billion dollars.

ETHNIC POLITICS: The Republican National Committee has taken a leaf from Richard Nixon's 1972 campaign notebook and dispatched fund-raising letters to Spanish-American federal employes and contractors.

In a dear "amigos" letter, the chairman of the Republican Hispanic Assembly, Ben Fernandez, urged attendance at a testimonial dinner for Spanish-Americans in the Ford administration. Fernandez asked for a minimum contribution of $30. The message was clear to Spanish-American federal employes and contractors: If they want to protect their jobs, they had better cough up.

A spokesman for the GOP Hispanic Assembly said he saw no impropriety in the solicitations.

Italian-Americans, meanwhile, have complained that they are being ignored by Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter.

In a letter to Carter's New York headquarters, officers of the Italian-American Committee griped that the Democrat had gone out of his way to meet with several other ethnic groups during the party's recent convention, but had blithely bypassed them.

There are 25 million Americans with blood ties to Italy, the letter states, and many "have severe problems with housing, educational opportunity, jobs and promotional opportunity." But Carter, the Italian-Americans charged, seems to lack an "understanding of the problems and issues of ethnics."

Within a day after we inquired about the letter at Carter headquarters, the Italian-Americans received word that the presidential candidate would be happy to meet with them in New York.

STRETCHED "BOOTS": Rep. Charles Diggs, D.-Mich., who heads the House District of Columbia Committee, habitually lays down the law to city officials. But he hasn't hesitated to bend the law to his own purposes.

Diggs left an official reception last year and found a police "boot" locked to the wheel of his automobile. The legislator, who oversees police pay and operations, was "astonished," he told us.

He assumed the ticketing officer had not noticed his congressional tags. When they discovered who he was, the police obligingly unlocked the congressman's wheels.

Diggs admitted to us that he had been ticketed "three or four times" but had ignored the tickets because he was on "official business." Our sources say Diggs has been written up far more times than that.

FTC CONFLICT: You might say that former Federal Trade Commission public relations man Art Amolsch likes to have his cake and eat it too.

After leaving the FTC, Amolsch set up a consulting firm for companies who "want to avoid problems with the Federal Trade Commission." Soon afterward, he accepted an offer to become a part-time consultant to the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The FTC job was scuttled, however, when the agency's lawyers got a look at the promotional mailing Amolsch sent out for his new firm.

Amolsch told us that "I don't think it's a conflict of interest although I can see how it would look that way."

Farmer utilizes city waste water for home grown irrigation system

Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A city with a waste problem and a farmer in need of water may seem unrelated, but Vandalia, Mo. and the farm of L. E. Kohl are helping each other by being partners in an environmental experiment.

Since 1974, Louis Kohl regularly has pumped effluent from Vandalia's sewage treatment lagoon located near his property to irrigate 240 acres of corn. Not only has this increased Kohl's corn yields but also has relieved part of the city's waste problem.

"It all started four years ago when my brother ran out of water one season for his irrigation," Kohl says. "I leased his equipment and drew water from the lagoon. After only one application at a critical time I yielded 60 bushels per 60 acres."

Kohl even is doing better this year despite drought conditions throughout most of Missouri. He estimates he will yield 100 more bushels of corn per acre on his irrigated acres than on his dry acres.

So while other farmers do not have enough water for their irrigations systems, the Kohl farm virtually has an unlimited source — waste water. Still, not many farmers are wishing for a sewage lagoon on their property.

Part of the problem is the disadvantage of living next to a sewage lagoon. "It's not a bonanza nor is it a gift," says Coy G. McNabb, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Missouri-Columbia. "You've got trade-offs. There're the odors, the unknown risks and the elements of association."

By elements of association McNabb means the connotations that sewage brings to mind. Indeed, this may be the greatest barrier to the development of more irrigation systems like Kohl's.

"From an agricultural standpoint, there is a real resource here," says George B. Garner, professor of biochemistry at the University of Missouri-Columbia. "We just have to get around the psychological hang-ups we have about spraying that stuff around."

Actually, the "stuff" Kohl is spraying around is treated sewage. The city of Vandalia built in 1959 a lagoon on property formerly owned by Kohl. The lagoon allows sediments to settle and organisms to break down waste products.

The clear water Kohl pumps from the lagoon is fairly pure, with the exception of certain compounds, such as nitrogen, phosphate and potash. While the discharge of these nutrients into streams is harmful, they act as fertilizer when sprayed on land.

McNabb says if Kohl uses the lagoon for consumptive irrigation, applying the water in five acre-inches, he will utilize about $7.50 worth of nutrients per acre contained in the water.

Kohl estimates that each acre-inch of lagoon water contains four and a quarter pounds of nitrogen, six pounds of phosphate and four and a half pounds of potash. While this is a significant amount, McNabb says, it is inadequate for a complete fertilization program.

Aside from the benefits of using effluent for irrigaton, there are some risks.

"We try to make it 100 per cent foolproof," Garner says. "It's a matter of how much risk you're willing to take."

Garner says in towns with industry the danger exists that such waste water may have metalic contamination. Smaller towns, lacking industry, reduce the chances of soil contamination.

"If we're using simply household waste, by the time it has gone through a sewage plant I'd say it's relatively safe," Garner says.

Garner also warns that household wastes could contain some pesticides that are regulated on the farm but not in the city.

He recommends a "buffer zone" be created between the area where the water is being sprayed and where a person lives to minimize contact with airborne bacteria. Even if a person is exposed to these bacteria, Garner says, the effects often are no worse than eating at a bad restaurant.

"From the human standpoint, the farther removed from the initial contact of the effluent, the better," Garner says.

For this reason, Garner says, this type of irrigation only should be used on crops run through "the intermediate animal food chain." Lettuce, which is directly eaten by humans, would be unsuitable. Corn grown for livestock, which the Kohl farm corn is grown for, is ideal for this type of irrigation, Garner says.

Despite the low risks and high benefits, the Kohl farm is the only Missouri farm using effluent for irrigation. Part of the problem is foot-dragging on the part of the regulatory agencies.

McNabb says the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has not embraced the practice of using effluent for irrigation. The EPA prefers to construct time-tested waste systems which discharge effluent into streams.

Unlike the EPA, Missouri's Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is taking an interest in the Kohl farm irrigation system. Two weeks ago they helped organize a tour of the farm.

Charles Stiefermann, director of municipal wastes at DNR, says "We of course as a state agency encourage the recycling of any effluent. We see this as a good means of putting effluent to beneficial use."

Stiefermann believes DNR's role in the next years primarily will be educational. "It's a realistic alternative in the near future. It will take education to get around the mental block."

But with the rising cost of fertilizers and the continuing water shortages farmers may be more open to using effluent for irrigation.

Rural schools face difficulties in attaining class AA status by 1980

By CHRIS PATTERSON
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — In an attempt to assure quality education to children in rural areas, the State Board of Education is requiring class A schools to achieve AA classification by 1980, or lose their certification.

Schools see two major obstacles in the way of AA classification: small enrollment and lack of funds.

The Coffey school in Daviess County is one that cannot overcome these problems. Because of the decline in its enrollment, it does not have enough students to stay open. And the community is not happy to lose its school.

"I don't think we were cheating our kids as much as the state board thinks," says Ron Vogel, president of the Coffey Board of Education. "The whole community is upset about it. I've always been a small school man. I hate to see the small school pushed out this way."

Class AA standards require a school to offer 40½ units of credit in high school as opposed to the 24½ unit requirement of class A schools. Class AA schools also must make special education available for students who have learning disabilities.

Guidance counselors must be available at both elementary and high school levels. Vocational, trade, art and music classes must be offered.

"The purpose of this classification change is to assure every youngster the opportunity of what is considered a minimum education," says Leslie McDaniel, a director with the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The change to class AA does not have to be immediate, McDaniel says. Schools have been given until 1978 to come up to class AA standards. Until then, schools meeting class A standards will be certified but unclassified.

Between 1978 and 1980, schools that have not reached the minimum AA standards because of unusual circumstances may petition the State Board of Education for an extension.

In some towns, community support is strong enough to keep a school even if it is not certified. A school is not closed if it loses certification. It still may get state funding.

But an unclassified school may be hurt if students choose to go to a nearby classified school. In this case, the unclassified school district where the student lives can be forced to pay the student's tuition and transportation costs.

Those schools working toward AA classification greet the new requirement with mixed emotions. While officials concede the changes are generally good for education, many complain that the standards are inflexible.

"With a low number of students, hiring principals for added supervision and guidance counselors for the small amount of time that we really need them seems like a waste," says Joseph Marlow, superintendent of the Dadeville School in Daviess County. "The programs are good, but I doubt if we get in return what we will spend."

Nearly all school superintendents point out the difficulty of passing tax levies and bond issues to pay for the new required programs. They complain that the state demands higher standards for certification without the promise of additional funds to carry out those programs.

"People feel like they have paid as much as they can pay," Francis Troxell, Koshkonong School (Oregon County) superintendent says. "This is not just in school taxes, but everywhere. . . We're going to have to look to the state for more money. It will probably be impossible for us to reach AA status without a great deal of additional state help."

McDaniel points out that in many towns, the classification change just helps to speed schools toward a goal they eventually would achieve.

"The number of A schools has steadily decreased over the past few years," McDaniel says. "In 1972, there were 221 class A districts. Now we are down to 116."

One school system to change from A to AA in the past year is the Otterville system in Cooper County.

Larry Hagedorn, school superintendent, says great community desire, coupled with the State Board of Education ruling, were responsible for the system's change in status.

Class AA standards require a school to offer $40\frac{1}{2}$ units of credit in high school as opposed to the $24\frac{1}{2}$ unit requirement of class A schools. Class AA schools also must make special education available for students who have learning disabilities.

Guidance counselors must be available at both elementary and high school levels. Vocational, trade, art and music classes must be offered.

"The purpose of this classification change is to assure every youngster the opportunity of what is considered a minimum education," says Leslie McDaniel, a director with the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The change to class AA does not have to be immediate, McDaniel says. Schools have been given until 1978 to come up to class AA standards. Until then, schools meeting class A standards will be certified but unclassified.

Between 1978 and 1980, schools that have not reached the minimum AA standards because of unusual circumstances may petition the State Board of Education for an extension.

In some towns, community support is strong enough to keep a school even if it is not certified. A school is not closed if it loses certification. It still may get state funding.

But an unclassified school may be hurt if students choose to go to a nearby classified school. In this case, the unclassified school district where the student lives can be forced to pay the student's tuition and transportation costs.

Those schools working toward AA classification greet the new requirement with mixed emotions. While officials concede the changes are generally good for education, many complain that the standards are inflexible.

"With a low number of students, hiring principals for added supervision and guidance counselors for the small amount of time that we really need them seems like a waste," says Joseph Marlow, superintendent of the Dadeville School in Daviess County. "The programs are good, but I doubt if we get in return what we will spend."

Nearly all school superintendents point out the difficulty of passing tax levies and bond issues to pay for the new required programs. They complain that the state demands higher standards for certification without the promise of additional funds to carry out those programs.

"People feel like they have paid as much as they can pay," Francis Troxell, Koshkonong School (Oregon County) superintendent says. "This is not just in school taxes, but everywhere. . . . We're going to have to look to the state for more money. It will probably be impossible for us to reach AA status without a great deal of additional state help."

McDaniel points out that in many towns, the classification change just helps to speed schools toward a goal they eventually would achieve.

"The number of A schools has steadily decreased over the past few years," McDaniel says. "In 1972, there were 221 class A districts. Now we are down to 116."

One school system to change from A to AA in the past year is the Otterville system in Cooper County.

Larry Hagedorn, school superintendent, says great community desire, coupled with the State Board of Education ruling, were responsible for the system's change in status.

New managerial audit staff saves time, money

By SUSAN DIANE SMITH
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — In the year since the Public Service Commission (PSC) set up a managerial audit services unit, the staff has handled five audits and saved the commission hundreds of thousands of dollars, says Chairman Robert Pierce.

The managerial audit program, one of only two of its kind in the country, is designed to review systematically a company's managerial policies, practices and processes, with the emphasis on determining future effectiveness of present managerial policies.

"This program will become more important as time passes because testimony based on the staff's findings will be given as evidence in rate cases that come before the commission," Pierce said.

The commission is not currently using the managerial audit findings in such cases because only two of the staff members have had any previous first hand experience in the field of utility management.

The commission's staff believes this could lead to the staff being mislead or misinformed by the utility companies during an audit.

Chairman Pierce defends his young and inexperienced staff: "With a little bit of training, we can have as good an audit as we could get from a utility company or a consulting firm." Pierce criticized the consulting firms for being "on the look-out for their next job," and commended the managerial staff for saving the commission both time and money.

The fee charged by a consulting firm for a managerial audit such as the one done last year by Arthur Young (a large managerial auditing firm) can run well over $100,000, while the same audit by the commission's managerial staff can be completed for as little as $25,000. This leaves the commission with more time and money with which to begin other audits.

Dennis Aronson, who was formerly chief of the managerial services department, has been appointed head of the Utility Services Division, of which the managerial services is a department.

This is an attempt on the part of the commission to integrate the engineering, customer service and managerial auditing departments. This new division then will be able to answer any question the commission may have on a utility company's overall performance in an unbiased manner.

Aronson has had seven years' experience with Florida Power & Light Company, where he held a number of positions including management services supervisor. Aronson says the staff decides which companies to audit based on size and program costs (cost of the programs the company is presently involved in).

"These are companies that I feel that we could learn the quickest from," says Aronson.

Of the five audits since last September, four were selected department audits and the fifth was a general audit. The company that received the general audit was the Missouri Utilities Company. The final draft of the report has not been presented to the commission.

Vice President James Lansmon of Missouri Utilities says he is interested in the program and its results, but he says, "Utility companies should be allowed leeway to administer their own affairs."

Lansmon stresses the company and the commission's staff had a good relationship and the audit was systematic. "We have no violent reaction if the audit is fairly administered and properly used," he said.

Whether or not the commission has a right to intervene in utilities' managerial matters is a much debated issue. Both the staff of the commission and the utility companies agree that there is a fine line that the commission is not allowed to cross in intervening with the internal workings of the utility companies.

A recent example is the commission's court case with Southwestern Bell over its billing practices. Bell considers the commission's new regulations a violation of its managerial prerogatives.

So far, there have been no problems either in receiving information or implementing reforms in the managerial audit area. However, as the staff becomes more and more experienced in its duty it is very likely the staff's suggestions will lead to a court test.

Chairman Pierce points to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling (Bluefield Waterworks and Improvement Company case) as a basis for the commission's involvement in the area.

The ruling states that rates of return for utility companies should be dependent on a variety of factors including, "economical management." This requires, says Pierce, that the commission look into utility companies' managerial services.

Airline overbooking plan is rejected by federal agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline passengers should be told directly by airlines which overbook that a confirmed reservation on a flight doesn't necessarily mean a seat, a federal agency says.

The Civil Aeronautics Board made the proposal Tuesday as an interim regulation until it decides whether to adopt permanent rules governing overbooking by airlines.

The board turned down a plan by Delta Airlines to insert language in little-noticed government tariffs which could be used as a legal defense against claims that the airline misrepresented its reservations practices.

The board found that using tariffs — a legal statement of how an airline operates — to admit overbooking would not be an adequate warning for the public.

It proposed, instead, that airlines that want to protect themselves against claims of fraudulent misrepresentation do so not only by filing tariffs, but also by stating the overbooking practice in large signs at airport terminals and by giving all passengers a statement with their ticket describing the practice.

The interim rule proposed by the board does contain a potential loophole. It would require only those airlines filing tariffs admitting overbooking to so display the posters and hand out the leaflets.

Airlines that do not admit their overbooking practices in their tariffs would not be required to post any notices. However, those airlines apparently would be liable to misrepresentation claims by passengers.

The airlines and the public have 20 days to comment on the proposed interim measure before the CAB can decide to adopt it.

A 'cold' Big Apple melts for elderly woman robbed

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be hard now to convince 92-year-old Eugenia Tolmatchoff that New York is a cold-hearted city.

First there were the two men who caught the thief who snatched her purse and brought it back with her $170 Social Security money still intact.

And while they were chasing the thief, there was the stranger who saw her weeping over the money she thought she had lost, and gave her $170 out of his pocket.

And then there were the two nice policemen, who tried hard to catch up with the man who gave her the money, so she could return it because "I'm not greedy."

The elderly woman had just cashed her Social Security check at a bank and returned to her West 142nd Street home when a young man followed her into the lobby, grabbed her purse and fled.

Sanitationman Joseph Casalaro and Frank Nieve, a neighborhood resident, heard her screaming, saw the running thief and gave chase.

Three blocks away they caught him, grappled with him and got the purse. The thief broke loose and ran.

While all this was going on, an unidentified man asked the old woman why she was crying outside the building. She told him, he reached into his pocket, counted out $170 and handed it to her, saying:

"Here, this is yours. Don't upset yourself any more."

Harpers to note 50th

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Harper

BERTRAND— An open house will be given Sept. 26 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Harper of Bertrand Route One for their golden wedding anniversary.

The couple will receive their friends and relatives from 1:30-4 p.m. at the Bement Baptist Church near Bretrand. No invitations have been sent.

Harper and the former Fannie Anderson were married Sept. 25, 1926 at the Nazarene Church in Sikeston by the Rev. Cox.

The couple are parents of eight:

Mrs. Virginia McPherson and Vernon Harper of East Alton, Ill., Mrs. Pansy Buchanan of Cottage Hills, Ill., Edward Harper of Jerseyville, Ill., Paul Harper of Fredericktown, Stanford Harper of Bertrand, Dewey Harper Jr. of Sikeston and Gary Harper of Mount Vernon, Ill.

They also have several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Cancellation

The sessions taught by Mrs. Bernice Wooten at the Security Federal Savings and Loan Assn., 820 N. Main St., and sponsored by the Women's Aglow Fellowship of Sikeston, have been discontinued. The sessions had been scheduled for Friday night and the evening of Sept. 24.

Midway Island, 1,150 miles northwest of Honolulu, was annexed by the United States in 1867.

Seeing X-rated film beats crocheting

DALLAS (AP) — It was all for education and, anyway, as one of the members of the East Dallas Garden and Talk Society put it, "It was better than sitting around and crotcheting."

That's how a group of over-70 senior citizen ladies decided to go to an X-rated movie for their "study project" of the week.

The movie was "Alice in Wonderland," which resembles the classic fairy tale only in title. The rest of the movie is not the sort of thing you talk about with grandma.

"It was really something deciding what we were going to see," said 76-year-old Tassie Coleman. "We finally decided on the new version of 'Alice in Wonderland.' ... We really wanted to see something called 'Misty Beethoven,' but it was playing at a theater near Southern Methodist University. We didn't think that would be right for ladies our age. We didn't want to be mixed up with those hippie college kids."

Another of the movie viewers, Mrs. Crenshaw, who declined to give her first name, said another reason for choosing "Alice in Wonderland" over "Misty Beethoven" (also X-rated) was that it sounded like a nice movie in explaining to their grandchildren where they were going.

As the eight women, accompanied by a reporter, filed into the theater, sneers came from young persons sitting by the aisle.

"I don't think those grandmas know what they've walked into," said one loudly.

"I know one thing," Mrs. Crenshaw snapped, turning to the young man. "When I was your age, I had a lot more manners than to talk about people loud enough for them to hear me."

The first of the group to walk out was a 74-year-old who said the pornographic musical was not anything like her favorite Rodgers and Hammerstein plays.

About 40 minutes later, two others left. One was embarrassed; the other said she was bored.

ZUCCHINI CARROTS

A vinaigrette sauce is used on the hot vegetables.

1 quart thinly sliced pared carrots
1½ cups boiling water
Salt
1½ cups thinly sliced zucchini
¼ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
White pepper

In a medium saucepan, covered, boil the carrots and the water with ½ teaspoon salt until partly tender — about 5 minutes; add the zucchini and continue cooking until both vegetables are tender — about 5 minutes longer. Drain. Beat together the oil and vinegar with ¾ teaspoon salt and pepper and stir into the vegetables. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

10-year-old finds cans fun hobby

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. — Tina Fisher, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Fisher of Crossville Route Nine, has an interesting hobby.

Tina, who is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edge of Parma, Mo., collected soft drink cans which form a Bicentennial puzzle.

Collectors need one can representing each state to accomplish two puzzle-like formations. Stacked one way, the cans form a picture of Uncle Sam. In another grouping, a map of the 50 states is produced.

Surprisingly, the last can Tina needed to complete her collection was one from Tennessee. She finally got one on a trip through Texas and the collection was complete.

Tina, who will be a fifth grader at Bakers School this year, has been in nine of the states represented by the cans.

A 'cold' Big Apple melts for elderly woman robbed

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be hard now to convince 92-year-old Eugenia Tolmatchoff that New York is a cold-hearted city.

First there were the two men who caught the thief who snatched her purse and brought it back with her $170 Social Security money still intact.

And while they were chasing the thief, there was the stranger who saw her weeping over the money she thought she had lost, and gave her $170 out of his pocket.

And then there were the two nice policemen, who tried hard to catch up with the man who gave her the money, so she could return it because "I'm not greedy."

The elderly woman had just cashed her Social Security check at a bank and returned to her West 142nd Street home when a young man followed her into the lobby, grabbed her purse and fled.

Sanitationman Joseph Casalaro and Frank Nieve, a neighborhood resident, heard her screaming, saw the running thief and gave chase.

Three blocks away they caught him, grappled with him and got the purse. The thief broke loose and ran.

While all this was going on, an unidentified man asked the old woman why she was crying outside the building. She told him, he reached into his pocket, counted out $170 and handed it to her, saying:

"Here, this is yours. Don't upset yourself any more."

Harpers to note 50th

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Harper

BERTRAND— An open house will be given Sept. 26 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Harper of Bertrand Route One for their golden wedding anniversary.

The couple will receive their friends and relatives from 1:30-4 p.m. at the Bement Baptist Church near Bretrand. No invitations have been sent.

Harper and the former Fannie Anderson were married Sept. 25, 1926 at the Nazarene Church in Sikeston by the Rev. Cox.

The couple are parents of eight:

Mrs. Virginia McPherson and Vernon Harper of East Alton, Ill., Mrs. Pansy Buchanan of Cottage Hills, Ill., Edward Harper of Jerseyville, Ill., Paul Harper of Fredericktown, Stanford Harper of Bertrand, Dewey Harper Jr. of Sikeston and Gary Harper of Mount Vernon, Ill.

They also have several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Seeing X-rated film beats crocheting

DALLAS (AP) — It was all for education and, anyway, as one of the members of the East Dallas Garden and Talk Society put it, "It was better than sitting around and crotcheting."

That's how a group of over-70 senior citizen ladies decided to go to an X-rated movie for their "study project" of the week.

The movie was "Alice in Wonderland," which resembles the classic fairy tale only in title. The rest of the movie is not the sort of thing you talk about with grandma.

"It was really something deciding what we were going to see," said 76-year-old Tassie Coleman. "We finally decided on the new version of 'Alice in Wonderland.' ... We really wanted to see something called 'Misty Beethoven,' but it was playing at a theater near Southern Methodist University. We didn't think that would be right for ladies our age. We didn't want to be mixed up with those hippie college kids."

Another of the movie viewers, Mrs. Crenshaw, who declined to give her first name, said another reason for choosing "Alice in Wonderland" over "Misty Beethoven" (also X-rated) was that it sounded like a nice movie in explaining to their grandchildren where they were going.

As the eight women, accompanied by a reporter, filed into the theater, sneers came from young persons sitting by the aisle.

"I don't think those grandmas know what they've walked into," said one loudly.

"I know one thing," Mrs. Crenshaw snapped, turning to the young man. "When I was your age, I had a lot more manners than to talk about people loud enough for them to hear me."

The first of the group to walk out was a 74-year-old who said the pornographic musical was not anything like her favorite Rodgers and Hammerstein plays.

About 40 minutes later, two others left. One was embarrassed; the other said she was bored.

Cancellation

The sessions taught by Mrs. Bernice Wooten at the Security Federal Savings and Loan Assn., 820 N. Main St., and sponsored by the Women's Aglow Fellowship of Sikeston, have been discontinued. The sessions had been scheduled for Friday night and the evening of Sept. 24.

Midway Island, 1,150 miles northwest of Honolulu, was annexed by the United States in 1867.

Zucchini carrots

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

POTLUCK SUPPER

Meat Pie — Zucchini Carrots
Tossed Salad — Bread Tray
Nectarines — Cookie Bars

ZUCCHINI CARROTS

A vinaigrette sauce is used on the hot vegetables.

1 quart thinly sliced pared carrots
1½ cups boiling water
Salt
1½ cups thinly sliced zucchini
¼ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
White pepper

In a medium saucepan, covered, boil the carrots and the water with ½ teaspoon salt until partly tender — about 5 minutes; add the zucchini and continue cooking until both vegetables are tender — about 5 minutes longer. Drain. Beat together the oil and vinegar with ¾ teaspoon salt and pepper and stir into the vegetables. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

10-year-old finds cans fun hobby

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. — Tina Fisher, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy T. Fisher of Crossville Route Nine, has an interesting hobby.

Tina, who is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edge of Parma, Mo., collected soft drink cans which form a Bicentennial puzzle.

Collectors need one can representing each state to accomplish two puzzle-like formations. Stacked one way, the cans form a picture of Uncle Sam. In another grouping, a map of the 50 states is produced.

Surprisingly, the last can Tina needed to complete her collection was one from Tennessee. She finally got one on a trip through Texas and the collection was complete.

Tina, who will be a fifth grader at Bakers School this year, has been in nine of the states represented by the cans.

Together again

ReEnna Gage, 804 Delmar St., front row center,was surprised on her 88th birthday by a visit from five of her children, who had not been together for several years. Front row, from left, Lyndell Gage of the home, Mrs. Gage, and Lois Gage Hunt of Jennings. Back row, Carl Gage of Wright City, David Allen Gage of Roseburg, Ore. and Harold Gage of Mounds, Ill. Another son, Leland Gage of Ravenna, Ohio, was unable to attend. The spouses of the children and a grandson, Pete Gage of Mounds, Ill., were present, as were Mrs. Myrtle Wood of Sikeston and her grandson John.

Constant criticism harmful to children

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Parents who constantly criticize the things their children do wrong, while ignoring the things they do right, can cause problems in social adjustment, warns a Purdue University professor.

Prof. Donald Felker, head of the Department of Child Development and Family Studies within Purdue's School of Home Economics, believes that such behavior can adversely affect a child's self-image. "Kids start thinking negative things about themselves if this is all they get from parents," he warns.

Studies have shown that a poor self-concept can lead to academic trouble, social maladjustment and a generally unhappy child. In his book, "Building Positive Self-Concept," Felker offers a variety of ways in which parents can avoid that trap and teach their children to "like themselves."

"People often hesitate to express positive things about themselves — if you're positive about yourself, it's often misconstrued as 'prideful,' " Felker says. His advice is for parents not to be afraid to praise themselves in front of their children and to encourage their children to do the same thing.

Felker points out that studies seem to indicate that children do not know how to evaluate themselves; they often judge themselves more harshly than an adult would. Parents should teach their children the art of self-criticism.

Another suggestion is to set realistic goals for children rather than try to force or coerce them into doing something beyond their means.

Another common error that can reinforce a negative self-image, the father of five says, is to compare children with their brothers and sisters. "Evaluate them individually," he advises, while noting that some of the harshest critics are siblings who often expect 6-year-olds to behave like 9-year-olds.

Felker lists several signs of poor self-concept in a child, the first of which is the kind of thing a child says about himself. Does he seem to like himself, or does he apply words like "dummy"?

Is the child enthusiastic about new, different situations, or does he hesitate? Children with a poor self-image tend to be fearful of new situations and experiences.

Finally, how does the child evaluate himself? If he is hypercritical, Felker points out, this can lead to a negative self-image, causing the child to downgrade his accomplishments.

Female towermen guard forests

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

MONTICELLO, Ark. (AP) — In an eight-by-eight-foot cab 126 feet up a steel frame, Bethel Chapman's gray eyes survey the area to spot "new smoke."

On guard in one of Arkansas' 99 fire towers, the watchman is a woman.

Mrs. Chapman has been a "towerman," the official name for the state-paid position, 15 years. She is a towerman of towermen.

Her father was towerman 43 years, her husband was a towerman for 20. She succeeded her husband at "Chapman tower" 15 years ago.

"I was raised in this life," she said. "I've been going up and down these steps since I was 6 years old. My kids and my grandkids played here on these steps and landings."

There are 144 wooden steps and 18 platform landings en route to the cab at the top of the tower.

"Once you are at the top, it's worth the effort, every time," she said. "Nature is just beautiful."

The watchman's job is to keep an eye out for "new smoke."

Smoke can normally be seen rising from regular locations, such as factories. These signs of smoke are called "permanent smokes."

But a new smoke can be a sign of fire in the forest.

Ann Landers

Reader wants to remove stigma from homosexuals

Dear Ann Landers: I read with considerable alarm the column in which you insist homosexuals suffer from a "severe personality disorder." You refer to a number of psychiatrists who agree with you and also state that the American Psychiatric Association does not.

I would like to call to your attention that the American Psychological Association not only supports the notion that homosexuality, per se, implied no impairment in judgment, stability, social or vocational capability, but further urges psychologists to take the lead in removing the stigma that has long been associated with homosexual orientation.

I feel it is only fair that you let it be known that yours is a minority opinion. -- S.F.M., Ph. D., California

Dear S.F.M.: Since you are a Ph.D. perhaps you can tell me the origin of one of my favorite quotes: "One person with courage constitutes a majority."

I agree with the American Psychological Association's statement that homosexuality per se implies no impairment in judgment, stability, social or vocational ability. I am well aware that a great many homosexuals function in their jobs and interact with others far more successfully than some heterosexuals. In fact, the only difference is their sexual preference.

We part company, however, at that juncture. I believe, when an individual prefers a member of his (or her) own sex as an object of physical love, that person suffers from a severe personality disorder.

Dear Ann Landers: Many people were shocked at the results of your survey which indicated that 70 per cent of the parents questioned said if they had it to do over again they would NOT have children.

Our own paper, the Kansas City Star, did a survey of its own and it came out quite differently. They asked Dr. Roy Menninger for an opinion. He said, "Ann Landers' survey 'didn't fit.' " Well, I just read some figures from the U.S. Census Bureau and it looks like Dr. Menninger is out of tune with the times and that your survey reflects what is really going on in this country. Here are the facts:

One out of every 25 wives between 18 and 24 years of age expects to have NO children. Ten years ago the ratio was one out of every 100. Analysts predict this sharp rise will continue in the years ahead.

Disillusionment with parenthood seems particularly strong among college students. The number of couples who want only one child has also grown in the past five years. The number of couples who plan to have one child or NONE has increased more than 80 per cent in the past five years. So, "findings" to the contrary notwithstanding, you were right again. -- With You In K.C.

Dear With: Like Henry Clay, I'd rather be right than President. Especially NOW. Thanks for writing.

Socialist party fails to get on election ballot

Once again an attempt by the Missouri Socialist Workers' Party to get on the ballot for the general election has failed because not enough signatures on their nominating petition were valid.

The party sought to place their candidates for president, vice president, U.S. senator, governor and lieutenant governor, on the ballot.

An attempt to put Barbara Mutnick on the general election ballot in 1974 for the U.S. Senate race also failed when the Missouri Supreme Court upheld Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick's holding that those petitions lacked the number of qualified signatures.

Recollections of Mao Tse-tung

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — This is of Mao the man. And of his relationship to Chairman Mao of China and to Mao the Communist.

My knowledge of Mao comes from eight months in the caves of Yenan in World War II before he came to power. I was an American Army officer in contact with Mao and his aides, four months of the time as acting commander of the American military mission there.

Mao, above all was intensely interested in ideas — ideas for putting things into practice — almost disdainful of theory. Time and again he would search out people who know more about a subject than he and probe their minds.

He was woefully weak in mathematics. And had little understanding of economics, industry or even of agriculture — though he grew up on a farm. His interest was in organization and the relationship of people. He wanted to know how organizations worked — whether armies, governments, political groups, schools or even theaters — and if they could be useful in accomplishing his aims.

Superbly confident, certain of the correctness of his thinking and his actions, he loved to argue with friends, associates and even strangers. But if the arguments turned too philosophical, he would turn away.

He had great faith in self reliance. And in planning. He planned so thoroughly in fact, that after a run of defeats which would have felled another man, he was able to come back with greater strength, time and again.

For himself, he cared little for money, or clothing, or art or philosophy. He had contempt for the badges and formalities of office. But he was greedy for the power.

He was a Communist, I felt, because of the disdain he had for the men of money he had known from his youth and their treatment of him and his friends. This hatred included his well-to-do father.

He worshipped strength. Without strength, he believed, you could do nothing. He had great faith in strong men. Like Bismarck. And strong emperors and military commanders of old China.

He wanted to control men's actions, their jobs, their choice of wives, who went to higher school and who not, who was promoted and when men married. He wanted to insure with whatever force necessary that all men and women from the highest to the lowest had correct thoughts — as he defined correct thought. He wanted to make certain that all producers, farmers or workers produced what crops Mao wanted, what goods he decreed.

In return for this loss of personal freedom and right of decision, and for censorship of thought, Mao was determined that all citizens have enough food, enough clothing, a place to live and medical care.

Each individual must submerge himself and his personal ambition to the state, which was Mao.

In return, Mao was determined that his officials not be financially corrupt, and that they not steal or otherwise divert food or funds from the citizenry for personal gain, but only in the interests of the state or as punishment for deviation.

Mao himself was a perennial revolutionary. Gaining power was not enough. Even when he and his men were in control, he refused to become the Establishment. He hated his own bureaucracy with as much passion as the bureaucracy which preceeded his.

"But I do regard the people as a flock of sheep and it is obvious the government must play the part of the shepherd. If there is no shepherd, who will guide the sheep?"

Mental health chairmen named for Morehouse

RISCO — Five bellringer workers will go house to house this month in connection with the Mental Health Month fund-raising drive in Risco, Mrs. Don Lancaster, the local campaign chairwoman has announced.

"We are looking forward to a very successful drive this year," Mrs. Lancaster said.

Donations will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary organization working to promote mental health.

Mrs. Lancaster offered these facts about mental illness: mental illness affects more Americans than any other illness, yet most cannot get adequate care; one in four families is affected by mental illness; mental disorders can be cured, but more research is needed. mental illness is America's most costly health problem — more than $21 billion.

Socialist party fails to get on election ballot

Once again an attempt by the Missouri Socialist Workers' Party to get on the ballot for the general election has failed because not enough signatures on their nominating petition were valid.

The party sought to place their candidates for president, vice president, U.S. senator, governor and lieutenant governor, on the ballot.

An attempt to put Barbara Mutnick on the general election ballot in 1974 for the U.S. Senate race also failed when the Missouri Supreme Court upheld Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick's holding that those petitions lacked the number of qualified signatures.

Recollections of Mao Tse-tung

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — This is of Mao the man. And of his relationship to Chairman Mao of China and to Mao the Communist.

My knowledge of Mao comes from eight months in the caves of Yenan in World War II before he came to power. I was an American Army officer in contact with Mao and his aides, four months of the time as acting commander of the American military mission there.

Mao, above all was intensely interested in ideas — ideas for putting things into practice — almost disdainful of theory. Time and again he would search out people who know more about a subject than he and probe their minds.

He was woefully weak in mathematics. And had little understanding of economics, industry or even of agriculture — though he grew up on a farm. His interest was in organization and the relationship of people. He wanted to know how organizations worked — whether armies, governments, political groups, schools or even theaters — and if they could be useful in accomplishing his aims.

Superbly confident, certain of the correctness of his thinking and his actions, he loved to argue with friends, associates and even strangers. But if the arguments turned too philosophical, he would turn away.

He had great faith in self reliance. And in planning. He planned so thoroughly in fact, that after a run of defeats which would have felled another man, he was able to come back with greater strength, time and again.

For himself, he cared little for money, or clothing, or art or philosophy. He had contempt for the badges and formalities of office. But he was greedy for the power.

He was a Communist, I felt, because of the disdain he had for the men of money he had known from his youth and their treatment of him and his friends. This hatred included his well-to-do father.

He worshipped strength. Without strength, he believed, you could do nothing. He had great faith in strong men. Like Bismarck. And strong emperors and military commanders of old China.

He wanted to control men's actions, their jobs, their choice of wives, who went to higher school and who not, who was promoted and when men married. He wanted to insure with whatever force necessary that all men and women from the highest to the lowest had correct thoughts — as he defined correct thought. He wanted to make certain that all producers, farmers or workers produced what crops Mao wanted, what goods he decreed.

In return for this loss of personal freedom and right of decision, and for censorship of thought, Mao was determined that all citizens have enough food, enough clothing, a place to live and medical care.

Each individual must submerge himself and his personal ambition to the state, which was Mao.

In return, Mao was determined that his officials not be financially corrupt, and that they not steal or otherwise divert food or funds from the citizenry for personal gain, but only in the interests of the state or as punishment for deviation.

Mao himself was a perennial revolutionary. Gaining power was not enough. Even when he and his men were in control, he refused to become the Establishment. He hated his own bureaucracy with as much passion as the bureaucracy which preceeded his.

"But I do regard the people as a flock of sheep and it is obvious the government must play the part of the shepherd. If there is no shepherd, who will guide the sheep?"

Mental health chairmen named for Morehouse

RISCO — Five bellringer workers will go house to house this month in connection with the Mental Health Month fund-raising drive in Risco, Mrs. Don Lancaster, the local campaign chairwoman has announced.

"We are looking forward to a very successful drive this year," Mrs. Lancaster said.

Donations will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary organization working to promote mental health.

Mrs. Lancaster offered these facts about mental illness: mental illness affects more Americans than any other illness, yet most cannot get adequate care; one in four families is affected by mental illness; mental disorders can be cured, but more research is needed. mental illness is America's most costly health problem — more than $21 billion.

Thunderbird, LTD II to head Ford lineup

Two new automobiles – the Thunderbird and LTD II –head the lineup of Ford Division's 1977 cars, which are on display at Sikeston Motor Co., 1030 S. Main St.

From subcompact to full-size, Ford dealers in 1977 will be offering customers the widest choice of car sizes available.

Heading the list are two all-new mid-size cars -- the luxurious Thunderbird, a two-door hardtop, and the LTD II, offering sporty- looking two-door models as well as elegant four- door models and station wagons.

The new Thunderbird is a luxurious mid-size car, and the LTD II is a stylish intermediate-size family car.

Other 1977 entries include the full-size LTD, with its renown for quiet, comfort and ride; the Granada, Ford's hot-selling "swing" car; Pinto, America's most popular subcompact; Mustang II, a small specialty car sales leader; Maverick, the proven, durable compact; and the highly popular Econoline Club Wagon.

"For 1977, Ford cars are uniquely in step with the market," says Clint Elledge, owner of Sikeston Motor Co. "Our cars give customers the opportunity to select the right size car to meet his or her driving needs."

The 1977 Thunderbird, for example, Elledge said, is a specialty car on a 114- inch wheelbase. Overall length is 215.5 inches. The two-door hardtop Thunderbird offers high levels of standard equipment, a quiet, comfortable ride and excellent handling -- all at an affordable price.

Ford Division's other new mid-size entry, the LTD II, comes in three series. The base LTD II "S" and mid-series LTD II each feature a distinctive two-door hardtop, a four- door pillared hardtop and a station wagon. The top of- the line LTD II Brogham offers two- and four-door models, and the elegantly appointed LTD II Squire is Ford's high- series mid-size station wagon.

All LTD II models have a lean, sculptured look, yet offer six-passenger comfort.

"Both of these cars will greatly strengthen our position in the largest segment of the automobile market," Elledge said. "The Thunderbird and the LTD II two- door models give Ford division a powerful one- two punch in the specialty or upper end of the segment, and the four-door LTD II models and station wagons are ideal for buyers seeking six- passenger comfort and other full-size car attributes -- at a smaller price."

For 1977, all Pinto models have a new, sportier- looking front end. A new all-glass third door (a no-extra- cost option) gives three- door Pinto models a fresh, modern look and, two- and three- door Runabout models are in a lower inertia weight class (2,750 pounds) -- the same as the 1976 Pinto Pony models.

Addition of a Pinto Cruising Wagon in 1977 will greatly expand the subcompact's appeal in the youth segment of the automobile market. Other new Pinto options include a flip-up open air roof, a Sports Rally Package with tachometer and gauges and a four-way manual driver's seat.

In 1977, Granada becomes the first domestic car to offer a four-speed manual overdrive transmission as standard equipment.

Ford LTD remains full-size for 1977. The top-of-the-line LTD Landau has been repositioned into the price class of the LTD Brougham -- which has been deleted from the lineup- - but continues such standard luxury features as hidden headlamps, wide, color-keyed bodyside moldings and a high level flight bench seat with a fold-down center armrest.

Mustang II for 1977 offers a host of improvements, including added standard equipment on 2+2 models at no added cost, the flip-up open air roof and four-way manual driver's seat, a Ghia Sports Group and other exciting new options and money-saving packages that group popular optional items.

To meet the U.S. government's more stringent 1977 model year emission control standards, most Ford cars have revised emission control systems that include a larger volume catalyst and Ford's new Duraspark high- energy solid-state ignition system which provides increased voltage at both starting and running speeds, allowing leaner air- fuel mixture and even longer spark-plug life.

Ford for 1977

Two new sporty, two-door models for the largest segment of the automobile market — Thunderbird, (top) and LTD II — are among the multiple choice offerings from the Ford Division for 1977. The Thunderbird retains much of its predecessor's character, but is now a mid-size car with a mid-size price. LTD II, sculptured lean with a trim look, will be offered as a four-door as well as a two-door model.

Book is published about Bollinger County past

MARBLE HILL — The Bicentennial year has produced a number of important accomplishments in southeast Missouri counties, but few will be as enduring as "Bolinger County: 1851-1976", a history now being completed as a Bicentennial commemorative at Marble Hill.

The book, which was written and researched by some 75 volunteers, is the work of a special Bicentennial publications committee. Mary L. Hahn, a Marble Hill historian who has authored a number of newspaper articles as well as a book, "Bits of History", is editor of the forthcoming history.

"Bollinger County: 1851-1976" will include some 300 pictures, have more than 1,000 pages, be fully indexed and contain a biographical section of some of the families who have lived in the country since it was organized 125 years ago. The book will be bound in a rich, embossed, brown cover with a wood grain finish.

Mrs. Hahn organized the book by chapters for each of the county's communities, including many which now are ghost towns. Special sections of the book deal with the Civil War and other themes which have countywide implications. This is the first history written about Bollinger County.

"Bollinger County: 1851-1976" is expected to have a wide appeal, not only among Bollinger Countians but other southeast Missourians who have had ancestors to live there.

The Banner-Press, P.O. Box 45, Marble Hill, Mo. 63764, is agent for the Bicentennial commission and is accepting prepublication orders now, for $19.76 per copy, plus $2 for postage and handling if ordered by mail. After Oct. 1, the book will sell for $25.

Gallup firm to enlarge

NEW YORK (AP) — The Gallup Organization, well-known marketing and attitude research firm, has decided to enlarge its role in the increasingly significant area of measuring consumer economics and buying intentions.

George Gallup, chairman, scheduled a luncheon here today to announce that Jay Schmiedeskamp, director of the famed Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan, will be employed to develop the program.

The Michigan survey will continue under the direction of F.Thomas Juster, who joined the organization four years ago, and George Katona, pioneer in consumer psychology and first director of the center, and Schmiedskamp's mentor.

Katona said the loss of Schmiedskamp would be felt deeply at the center, but he praised the Gallup move, which he viewed not as competition but as "a wonderful gain for attitudinal and psychological research."

He indicated, however, that the Gallup organization's efforts would initially be somewhat handicapped by the limitations of data.

"Gallup obviously doesn't have what we have," he said. Asked what that was, he replied, "Twenty years of past data to understand new data."

The move underscores the growing recognition that not only consumer ability but also willingness to spend is critical to the effectiveness of business and government programs, and that it can be measured and used for predicting.

Gallup thus joins the Survey Research Center, Sindlinger & Co. and The Conference Board, currently the major forces in the measurement through interviews, of consumer economics and psychology, a field that has grown slowly over a 30-year period.

Its development has been spurred by the rise in discretionary income, or income above that which must be used for immediate needs and which thus affords families the option of what to buy, or even of whether to buy or bank.

During the 1970s consumer researchers demonstrated that, while consumers might be able to afford purchases, they often refrained from doing so because of Vietnam, Watergate and, as Katona says, a general malaise.

Katona commented a few days ago that "Watergate was an economic factor, an economic cancer." Millions of Americans with the financial ability to buy decided against big ticket purchases and investments. They lacked faith, he said.

Early in 1973, said Katona, he saw the recession of 1974 developing. With consumer attitudes deteriorating it became clear that expansion could not continue, he said, the projections of business and government economists notwithstanding.

"The most volatile and critical factor in the economy is consumer attitudes, consumer discretionary expenditures," he said. "It is not the economic cycle; consumers bring about the economic cycle."

At 20, you're fired with zeal; after 40, you hope it will be with severance pay.

Blood pressure screening to be offered at district fair

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The Cape Girardeau County Division of the Missouri Heart Association again is providing free blood pressure readings at the Southeast Missouri District Fair. The program should be of special interest to all fairgoers, since blood pressure is related closely with heart disease the No. 1 killer.

The blood pressure screening booth, a mobile home, will be open from 1 to 9 p.m. daily through Saturday.

The booth is staffed by volunteer nurses from the area, who take the blood pressure readings, and other community volunteers, who perform additional services necessary to the success of the program.

Persons who participate in the blood pressure screening and are found to have abnormal blood pressure readings will be referred to their physician for further check and diagnosis. Anyone who wishes to have a blood pressure test need only to stop by the booth at the fair.

CHAFFEE — Martha Adams and Venus Frissell represented the Chaffee Community Teachers Association at a workshop held Sept. 9 at the Southeast Service Center of the Missouri State Teachers Association in Dexter.

The workshop, designed to train CTA leaders, was directed by MSTA Area field coordinator Frances Phillips.

In addition to reviewing the CTA-MSTA handbook prepared for local leaders, workshop participants viewed MSTA's new audio visual presentations which use the sound-slide format. The presentations are designed to inform members about the various association programs and services.

The Missouri State Teachers Association, established in 1856, has a membership of more than 44,000 and is the largest professional organization of educators in the state. It is headquartered in Columbia and has area service offices in St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield and Dexter.

Symington expresses concern

Controls on bureaucracy are needed

By STUART SYMINGTON
United States
Senator

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In the past 10 years we have seen the growth of something akin to a fourth branch of government with the creation of a bureaucracy with ever-increasing powers but little or no accountability.

Since 1965, the number of independent agencies has doubled, as has the number of their employes. The total budget of these agencies has grown from $860 million to $3.8 billion.

Even more bureaus have been established within the various Cabinet Departments.

The power of these agencies was revealed by a recent Library of Congress study which found that in 1974 Congress passed 404 laws while the bureaucracy churned out 7,496 new or revised regulations. That is 18 regulations for every law.

We have all heard horror stories about the nonsense of some of these rules and regulations--HEW banning mother-daughter and father-son banquets, for example, or OSHA warning against climbing broken ladders in a booklet about safety on the farm.

Too often the orders of different agencies conflict. For example, sanitation requirements for meat-packing plants might call for tile or stainless steel counters, surfaces most easily cleaned. However, OSHA discourages use of such materials as too noise-reflective and not meeting their noise standards.

The extent of detail and minutia is also staggering. One issue of the Federal Register, for example, included standards for measuring good orange juice color. The succeeding notice in the same issue restricted the number of lemons that could be shipped from California to Arizona in one week.

On the other hand, many such regulations are beneficial. Banking regulations protect account-holders against loss in the event of a bank failure. Annual highway death tolls have declined since the Traffic Safety Administration was established 10 years ago. And in the five years since the Environmental Protection Agency was created, sport fishing has returned to the Great Lakes, and the Cuyahoga River in Ohio doesn't catch on fire anymore.

What we need is better control over the bureaucracy charged with carrying out well-intended programs. We need more effective review and oversight to make sure the goals of these programs are being achieved, that they are efficient and cost-effective and that duplication is avoided.

To that end, before adjourning this year, the Senate plans to take up and pass the Government Economy and Spending Reform Act, known as the Sunset Bill. I am a cosponsor of this legislation. It would require all federal spending programs to be reauthorized or terminate after five years.

Public hearings to be held on base closure

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — Public hearings are currently being scheduled for the Blytheville area for mid-October to receive comment on the draft environmental impact statements naming Blytheville Air Force Base as an alternate for closure or reduction in activity at two other Air Force bases. Specific dates and times are yet to be set.

The Air Force made public draft environmental impact statements addressing the reduction in operations at Loring Air Force Base, Maine, and the closure of Kincheloe Air Force Base, Mich. Blytheville Air Force Base closure was listed as an alternative to those two proposed actions which were announced by the secretary of the Air Force on March 11.

A 45-day on- the - record public comment period during which the public is invited to comment on the draft environmental statements and their proposed actions and alternatives begins tomorrow.

On- the - record comments can be made at the public hearings tentatively scheduled for there days in mid-October, or can be submitted in writing until Oct. 25 to Dr. Billy Welch, Special Assistant for Environmental Quality, Office of the Secretary of the Air Force (SAF-ILE), Washington, D.C., 20330, or the Chairman, Environmental Protection Committee, Headquarters, Strategic air Command - DEP, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb. 68113.

A 15-day extension to the public comment period can be granted upon request. The comments received at the public hearings and in writing from individuals and agencies will be used in preparing a final environmental statement.

The final environmental statements are tentatively scheduled to be filed with the Council on Environmental Quality on Jan. 25, 1977. No final decision on the proposed actions announced last March, or the alternatives announced Friday will be made until after the filing of the final statement.

Copies of the draft environmental impact statements naming Blytheville Air Force Base as an alternative to the closing of Kincheloe and reduction in activity at Loring and discussing the environmental impact of the actions on the Blytheville area are available by writing the 97th Bomb Wing Office of Information, Blytheville Air Force Base, Ark, 72315.

Copies are also available for public review at the Blytheville Public Library, the Blytheville Air Force Base Library and Blytheville Chamber of Commerce office. Environmental narratives are also available at the two libraries.

Anyone having questions concerning the statements or the 45-day public comment period, or the public hearings is encouraged to call the office of information at the base, telephone number 763-3931, extensions 7214 or 7232.

CBS TV news is charged with violation of FCC fairness dostrine

BOSTON, Va. — The American Security Council Education Foundtion has filed a complaint before the Federal Communications Commission charging CBS-TV News with massive and continuing violations of the FCC's Fairness Doctrine in reporting national security viewpoints.

The complaint was based on the findings of a study covering 37 months of CBS-TV News programming.

This continuing study found that CBS-TV had almost totally blanked out the most important national security views of a majority of the American people.

For example, it found that the viewpoint that the United States should be militarily superior to the Soviet Union was almost totally ignored -- only one mention was found in all the programs analyzed, although substantial coverage was given to other viewpoints.

Yet, in 1975, Opinion Research Corp. found that over three-fourths of the American people (76 per cent) were for U.S. military superiority over the Soviet Union.

John M. Fisher, president of the American Security Council Education Foundation, said that "this pattern of refusal by CBS news to give time to the majority viewpoint while giving time to other viewpoints is one of the most serious and effective forms of advocacy journalism practiced by CBS-TV News.

"The omission of this and other viewpoints held by a majority of the American people violates all the rules of fair play, and is a denial of the democratic process," Fisher remarked.

The complaint is the outgrowth of a landmark study by the Institute for American Strategy (now the American Security Council Education foundation).

This study, released in October 1974, was conducted by a team of scholars headed by Dr. Ernest, W. Lefever, then senior fellow in foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution.

After the original study was released, Walter Cronkite confirmed the validity of its findings in an interview with Betty Utterback of the Gannett News Service when he said:

"There are always groups in Washington expressing views of alarm over the state of our defenses. We don't carry these stories. The story is that there are those who want to cut defense spending."

Despite Cronkite's admission, CBS News president Richard S. Salant and Arthur R. Taylor, president of CBS, Inc., totally rejected the scholars' finding in early 1975 and refused to change CBS news policies.

Named head of state arts council

ST. LOUIS — Don Tapperson, vice president and executive director of Bingham Sketches, Inc., has been named executive director of the Missouri Arts Council.

He will assume his duties Oct. 11.

The appointment was announced by Stanley J. Goodman, the council chairman.

Created by the Missouri Legislature in 1965, the Missouri Arts Council is the second oldest and fifth largest state arts council in the nation.

The 15-member council and its staff are responsible for fostering cultural opportunities for Missourians throughout the state. It initiates and cosponsors with local organizations presentations of theater, music, dance, films, opera and visual arts.

Alfred C. Sikes, director of the Missouri Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing, said of the appointment, "I am delighted that Don Tapperson has agreed to assume the executive leadership of the Missouri Arts Council. Don is a very able person, having most recently proven his ability as the staff leader of the fund raising for Bingham Sketches, Inc."

Bingham Sketches, Inc. is the not-for-profit corporation which raised more than $1.8 million last autumn and this spring to acquire the 112-work collection of drawings by 19th Centurv Missouri artist George Caleb Bingham.

It was created by Gov. Christopher S. Bond after the privately owned St. Louis Mercantile Library Association indicated that it would sell the drawings individually to the highest bidders, probably at public auction in the East. Having met its fund- raising collection by a June 30 deadline, Bingham Sketches is now buying the works, which will be given to the state in behalf of the people of Missouri and then be dissolved.

Donald Tapperson

Commenting on the appointment, Bond said, "Don Tapperson did an excellent job as executive director of Bingham Sketches, Inc., in coordinating the successful fund- raising effort. I am sure that he will continue to perform a valuable service to the state of Missouri as executive director of the Missouri Arts Council."

Tapperson, 37, was educated in the public schools of St. Louis and Springfield and attended Drury College in Springfield and Harvard and Columbia universities, where he majored in English and anthropology.

He was a member of the staff of the St. Louis Post- Dispatch from 1961 to 1972, working variously as a general assignment reporter, political reporter, legislative correspondent, a member of the newspaper's editorial board and as a special assignments reporter.

Tapperson succeeds Rick George, a former executive director of the South Carolina Arts Council, who resigned in June to return to that state.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

Mr. Jack Anderson in his repetitive column of August 26 once again subjects his forbearing readers to his familiar and tiresome medley of allegations against the President of Nicaragua.

In criticizing United States aid to my country, Mr. Anderson has never once made reference to the policies and programs of the Somoza Government which have brought about fundamental changes in the national life, especially in the areas of health, education and social well-being. Nor is the mention ever made of the fact that programs involving United States aid are carried out with the complete cooperation and approval of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The American people deserve to receive a more balanced view of the generous aid of their country to Nicaragua which, in addition, would permit them to understand better one of their most steadfast friends among the nations of the world. For those who feel they can write on the subject it calls for a modicum of international economic and political literacy.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Editor:

In the current City Government debate much as been said about us living in a Democracy and that the City Manager-Council form of government is not democratic and is therefore inferior and unfair. This is a non sequitur as the information is wrong. I would like to remind people that technically we do not live in a Democracy but rather in a Republic, i.e. in which "power is vested in representatives elected by popular vote". When we pledge allegiance, it is "to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands". There is nothing un-American about the Council-Manager form of government in which the power to run the City of Sikeston is vested in representatives (council members) elected by popular vote. The issue should be which form of government is more efficient and best serves it's citizens; not which form is "right", "democratic", or "American".

Sincerely,

Public hearings to be held on base closure

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — Public hearings are currently being scheduled for the Blytheville area for mid-October to receive comment on the draft environmental impact statements naming Blytheville Air Force Base as an alternate for closure or reduction in activity at two other Air Force bases. Specific dates and times are yet to be set.

The Air Force made public draft environmental impact statements addressing the reduction in operations at Loring Air Force Base, Maine, and the closure of Kincheloe Air Force Base, Mich. Blytheville Air Force Base closure was listed as an alternative to those two proposed actions which were announced by the secretary of the Air Force on March 11.

A 45-day on- the - record public comment period during which the public is invited to comment on the draft environmental statements and their proposed actions and alternatives begins tomorrow.

On- the - record comments can be made at the public hearings tentatively scheduled for there days in mid-October, or can be submitted in writing until Oct. 25 to Dr. Billy Welch, Special Assistant for Environmental Quality, Office of the Secretary of the Air Force (SAF-ILE), Washington, D.C., 20330, or the Chairman, Environmental Protection Committee, Headquarters, Strategic air Command - DEP, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb. 68113.

A 15-day extension to the public comment period can be granted upon request. The comments received at the public hearings and in writing from individuals and agencies will be used in preparing a final environmental statement.

The final environmental statements are tentatively scheduled to be filed with the Council on Environmental Quality on Jan. 25, 1977. No final decision on the proposed actions announced last March, or the alternatives announced Friday will be made until after the filing of the final statement.

The Tax Bill & You Part II

Congressional uncertainty about the economy will mean money in pockets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional uncertainty about the strength of the national economy will mean money in the pockets of most Americans.

Congress is about to extend for another 18 months the antirecession tax cuts that were enacted last year.

Without the extension:

—Taxes on virtually every American would rise, with the heaviest burden falling on the poorest families.

—The economy would be deprived of $15 billion in consumer spending.

—Businesses would lose to the tax collector about $4.5 billion a year that otherwise could be used to create jobs.

Congress is expected to take final action this week on a massive tax-revision bill that includes extension of the individual and business tax cuts as well as numerous other changes in tax law.

Although the economy is clearly on an upswing, Congress fears that ending the tax cuts now might cause an economic tailspin.

ALL TAXPAYERS

Every taxpayer could subtract from taxes owed $35 for himself and each dependent. A family of six, for example, could save $210 in taxes.

There is an alternative for smaller families and single persons. Instead of the $35-per-person credit, they could reduce their taxes by 2 per cent of their first $9,000 of income, or a maximum credit of $180.

The taxpayer could choose whichever option provides the greater tax saving.

To take advantage of the credit, the taxpayer totals his income, subtracts his deductions and exemptions, computes his taxes, then subtracts the credit from taxes owed.

The individual credit was available, but amounted to only $30, for 1975, meaning for taxes paid by April 15, 1976. The $35 credit and the $180 alternative are effective for returns filed in April 1977 and 1978.

NON-ITEMIZERS

—About 60 per cent of taxpayers use a standard deduction when figuring their taxes, meaning they do not itemize deductions for medical expenses, state and local taxes, contributions, etc.

Inflation in recent years has increased the value of itemized deductions but standard deductions remained comparatively low.

The standard deductions were raised last year and the bill would make these changes permanent:

Any taxpayer who does not itemize is allowed a $1,700 minimum deduction if single and $2,100 if married and filing a joint return, no matter how little he earns.

The maximum standard deduction is 16 per cent of income, but no more than $2,400 for single persons and $2,800 for couples.

Experts estimate that the higher standard deductions will encourage nine million taxpayers to switch from itemizing.

This means that couples who do not itemize will be allowed to subtract up to $2,800 from the amount of income subject to tax.

Cattle feeders report gain in Aug.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle feeders in the seven states keeping monthly records moved 1.59 million head to market last month, 31 per cent more than last August and 22 per cent more than in 1974, the Agriculture Department says.

Waiting in the feedlots there on Sept. 1, bound for slaughter and supermarket meat counters, were 6.43 million head, an increase of 8 per cent from the rcord Sept. 1 low of 1975 but still 6 per cent below that point two years ago.

Cattlemen during August had placed 1.4 million head on grain, a boost of 10 per cent above last year and 16 per cent above two years ago, the Crop Reporting Board said Tuesday.

The figures indicated continued high beef production, which USDA expects to start to lag more in the late fall as producers get cattle, calf and dairy herds down to the sizes they want.

The slaughter of cows, for example, ran 8 per cent higher than expected in the first seven months of this year, as producers sought to compensate for adverse economic balances, dry weather in the upper Great Plains and high production costs, industry analysts say.

The reports from Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Texas, Colorado, California and Arizona are used as a barometer on the cattle industry.

On the poultry industry, the board said in a separafe report Monday that almost 1.4 billion pounds, live weight, was inspected for slaughter during July, 9 per cent more than in July 1975 but 3 per cent below June.

Beef is the most-consumed meat in the country but the competition for consumers' dollars among beef, pork and poultry producers often will cause shifts in the slaughter rates of one or the other.

Only for turkeys did the board find an exception to the trend of poultry slaughter in July higher than last summer but below this June. The 270 million pounds inspected were 17 per cent more than in June and 11 per cent more than in July 1975.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite drought pockets in the major milk-producing areas of the north-central United States, production per dairy cow continued at a high-enough level in August to bring the month's total 5.7 per cent above a year before, the Agriculture Department reports.

"With pastures short or nonexistent (in those areas), cows are receiving a more-balanced ration than normal," the Crop Reporting Board said. "Also, a favorable relationship exists between milk and feed prices, making it economical to feed at a rate high enough to keep production up."

The August production of milk en route to consumers in one form or another was 10.13 billion pounds, with average output per cow up 56 pounds from August 1975 to 917 pounds.

For the first eight months of the year, the board said, production totalled 82.12 billion pounds, an increase of 3.8 per cent over that period last year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twelve senators have urged President Ford to aid sugar farmers by moving against foreign sugar suppliers with a tripling of the import tariff, a reduction in the amount that can come into this country and removal of sugar from the list of duty-free imports from lesser-developed nations.

Agriculture Department analysits say that sugar prices, low but stable from November to August, when a drop started, are reflecting a worldwide situation of ample supply and a lag in demand after the record boom prices of two years ago. A cutback in U.S. acreage couldn't offset that, they said.

Plan to House for funds to help build rifle ranges

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee is being asked to approve a controversial plan that would allow the use of federal funds to help private gun clubs build rifle ranges.

At the same time, opponents of the legislation claim it would reduce by about $4.5 million the amount of federal money that states could use for wildlife conservation programs.

Instead, the funds would be earmarked for hunter safety and target-range programs, already conducted by about 40 states in cooperation with the National Rifle Association.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., sponsor of the legislation, calls the proposal a safety measure that would teach "kids how to use (guns) safely." Dingell is a member of the board of directors of the NRA.

Opponents, including Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., say the bill represents a "total misuse of public money. Hunters and target shooters no more deserve federal subsidies than do golfers, bowlers or tennis players."

NRA lobbyists pushing for passage of the legislation say that all of the tax money involved comes from federal excise taxes on guns and ammunition.

They say the nation's 20 million hunters are "voluntarily being taxed to produce money" for purposes they support rather than "asking for it to be taken out of the federal Treasury."

The House Rules Committee, which clears legislation for House action, will be asked to make a decision on the conservation-shooting range legislation Wednesday.

Dingell's bill would add a new excise tax to those already collected on the sales of pistols and revolvers and bows and arrows. The new tax, expected to bring in about $6 million a year, would be on component parts of ammunition.

Under current law, the federal excise taxes were distributed to the states for wildlife programs or, at state option, some of the money could be used for hunter safety and target-range programs.

This option is removed in the Dingell bill, which specifies that a state must use part of the money for the hunter safety and target-range programs or risk losing the funds altogether.

Although the Dingell bill adds a new $6-million excise tax, conservation programs could lose money because of the requirement that states spend a portion of the funds on the safety and shooting programs. Based on 1975 figures, states got about $13 million from the taxes. All of this money was available for wildlife programs.

Hinchey drawings to be displayed at SeMo U

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A selection of 34 drawings by William Hinchey, a 19th century Missouri artist, will be displayed in Kent Library at Southeast Missouri State University for 13 days this month, beginning with a benefit opening from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday.

The Hinchey drawings to be shown at the university have been titled "Iron County Beginnings", since all were sketched in and around Iron County and depict scenes of that county.

Proceeds from the benefit opening will be used for further acquisition for the newly created Southeast Missouri State University Museum, according to Jane Stacy, director of alumni services at the university and chairman of the exhibit committee.

Mrs. Stacy said all Southeast Missouri State alumni in Iron County have been extended a special invitation to attend the opening.

Tickets for the benefit may be purchased at the door.

The Southeast Missouri State showing will mark only the second time that the drawings have been displayed publicly. The initial exhibition, which included substantially more of Hinchey's work than the sketches from Iron County, was titled "The Rediscovered Work of William Hinchey", and was on display at the St. Louis Art Museum for three months in 1974.

The exhibit is scheduled to be shown at the Nelson Gallery in Kansas City from Dec. 3 to Jan. 9, 1977.

Hinchey came to the United States in 1854 from Ireland and after a journey westward returned to settle in St. Louis. His introduction to Iron County came through a chance meeting with a clergyman who had established an academy in Arcadia under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church and who needed an instructor in French and drawing.

The Ozark highlands provided a visual delight for the artist, and the tree-covered slopes and ridges served as a natural canvas for Hinchey. He also traveled through the area filling diaries and sketchbooks with verbal and visual recordings of his surroundings, and theese expressions are the only existing records of many southeast Missouri towns.

In 1857, Hinchey married one of his students, Lucinda Jane Holloman, and they had six children. Although the family settled in St. Louis, they continued to return to the Arcadia Valley frequently.

Hinchey died in 1893 and is buried in DeSoto.

The drawings which Southeast Missouri State will exhibit range from one done in 1856 to several sketches in 1883.

Representative titles include "A Cave in the Arcadia Valley", "In the Valley of Arcadia, Mo., Looking North", "Moonlit Midnight at Mr. Holoman's, Belleville Valley, Mo.", "Main Street, Ironton, Mo.", "Pilot Knob, Mo.: The St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad".

The Tax Bill & You Part II

Congressional uncertainty about the economy will mean money in pockets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional uncertainty about the strength of the national economy will mean money in the pockets of most Americans.

Congress is about to extend for another 18 months the antirecession tax cuts that were enacted last year.

Without the extension:

—Taxes on virtually every American would rise, with the heaviest burden falling on the poorest families.

—The economy would be deprived of $15 billion in consumer spending.

—Businesses would lose to the tax collector about $4.5 billion a year that otherwise could be used to create jobs.

Congress is expected to take final action this week on a massive tax-revision bill that includes extension of the individual and business tax cuts as well as numerous other changes in tax law.

Although the economy is clearly on an upswing, Congress fears that ending the tax cuts now might cause an economic tailspin.

ALL TAXPAYERS

Every taxpayer could subtract from taxes owed $35 for himself and each dependent. A family of six, for example, could save $210 in taxes.

There is an alternative for smaller families and single persons. Instead of the $35-per-person credit, they could reduce their taxes by 2 per cent of their first $9,000 of income, or a maximum credit of $180.

The taxpayer could choose whichever option provides the greater tax saving.

To take advantage of the credit, the taxpayer totals his income, subtracts his deductions and exemptions, computes his taxes, then subtracts the credit from taxes owed.

The individual credit was available, but amounted to only $30, for 1975, meaning for taxes paid by April 15, 1976. The $35 credit and the $180 alternative are effective for returns filed in April 1977 and 1978.

NON-ITEMIZERS

—About 60 per cent of taxpayers use a standard deduction when figuring their taxes, meaning they do not itemize deductions for medical expenses, state and local taxes, contributions, etc.

Inflation in recent years has increased the value of itemized deductions but standard deductions remained comparatively low.

The standard deductions were raised last year and the bill would make these changes permanent:

Any taxpayer who does not itemize is allowed a $1,700 minimum deduction if single and $2,100 if married and filing a joint return, no matter how little he earns.

The maximum standard deduction is 16 per cent of income, but no more than $2,400 for single persons and $2,800 for couples.

Experts estimate that the higher standard deductions will encourage nine million taxpayers to switch from itemizing.

This means that couples who do not itemize will be allowed to subtract up to $2,800 from the amount of income subject to tax.

Proposed new regulation

Insurance policies to have explanatory information

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — How well do you understand your life insurance policy? Do you know the difference between whole life and term life insurance, or mutual and stock life insurance companies?

If you're like most Missourians, the state Division of Insurance says, you're unsure about what you're buying when you agree to purchase life insurance. In an effort to better inform the insurance customer, the division has proposed a regulation requiring the 530 life insurance companies operating in the state to include with their policies explanatory information on them.

The proposed regulation met with varying reaction Wednesday during a public hearing attended by some 65 insurance company representatives. Two large compnay representatives said there firms were ready to comply with the rule, while a Missouri insurance association spokesman voiced opposition to it.

The stated purpose of the regulation is to "improve the buyer's ability to select the most appropriate plan of life insurance for his needs, improve the buyer's understanding of the ... policy ... and improve the ability of the buyer to evaluate the relative costs of similar plans of life insurance."

A policy summary and buyer's guide would have to be provided to each customer or potential customer. The summary would contain information explaining the policy, and include such information as the cost of annual premiums, guaranteed amounts payable upon death, total guaranteed cash surrender values, cash dividends available and other information. The buyer's guide, which has been prepared by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, defines terms used in the policy statements and explains the various kinds of insurance.

"Our real concern is that the consumer cannot make a decision on whathe's buying," said H.W. Edmiston, division director.

The division's life supervisor, Carl Barnes, said inaction on the part of the state could result in the federal government establishing a regulation of its own.

John Britton, a Jfferson City lobbyist representing the Missouri Association of Life Underwriters, opposed the regulation, saying the threat of a federal rule was no reason to approve one in Missouri.

Schorr may not be charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television newsman Daniel Schorr apparently will not be charged with contempt of Congress for his refusal to name the person who supplied him with the House intelligence report.

Nine times during Schorr's sworn testimony Wednesday, Ethics Committee Chairman John J. Flynt Jr., D-Ga., warned him that he could be held in contempt of Congress and be jailed or fined if he refused to identify his source and answer other questions about the source.

Nine times, Schorr refused.

After the hearing, an informal poll of the members showed that six of the 12 committee members opposed any attempt to cite Schorr for contempt and two others either leaned that way or were uncertain. This means any contempt resolution apparently would fail by at least a tie vote.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., who had led the move to subpoena Schorr, said he leaned against a contempt citation. "I never intended in the first place that this would send him to prison," Bennett said. "This was a step to let him give his views and he did that."

But others who had voted to subpoena Schorr were opposed to holding him in contempt, including Rep. Donald J. Mitchell, R-N.Y. Mitchell said he wanted to prevent a constitutional confrontation over the issue.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who had opposed summoning Schorr, said he didn't think contempt action would even be proposed in committee. For all practical purposes, he said, Schorr's testimony has ended the committee's $150,000, five-month attempt to locate Schorr's source.

The committee still must prepare a report to the House on its search for the leaker and on its recommendations for improving security measures for committees dealing with sensitive subjects.

Both Schorr and committee members have said the hearing constituted a showdown over the constitutional rights of Congress to investigate and guard its materials versus the rights of a free press to gather and report the news.

Emergency red light is stolen

Earl McConnell, 203 Kennedy Drive, told public safety officers that an emergency red light was stolen off his van while he fought a fire Wednesday night at Holyfield Airport on Route H north of town.

McConnell is a volunteer fireman. The theft occurred between 8 and 9:30 p.m.

The red light was valued at $35.

St. Louis man injured

HOWARDVILLE — A St. Louis man was seriously injured Wednesday night in a single-vehicle accident near here on Interstate 55.

The highway patrol said the accident occurred .2 mile south of town at 11:40 p.m. when a northbound car driven by Francis Joseph Heeney, 60, of St. Louis ran off the road into the median and traveled approximately one-fourth mile before striking a maintenance crossover embankment.

Thieves hit Morley, Oran

BENTON — Thefts of $20 from a service station and a pickup truck occurred in the Morley-Oran area Wednesday night, the Scott County Sheriff's Department reported this morning.

A break-in at Gillie's service station in Morley was reported at 7:09 a.m. today. Approximately $20 was taken from a cash register.

Charles W. Taylor of Oran Route One reported at 6:22 a.m. today that his 1973 pickup truck had been stolen sometime during the night.

The sheriff's department is investigating both incidents.

First Small Claims case is heard

BENTON — The first suit to be heard in the newly formed Small Claims Court was heard Wednesday by Scott County Magistrate Lloyd G. Briggs.

The suit, filed Aug. 26 by Hilda Brown of Illmo against Bob Hensley of Scott City, asked $355 for damages to her car.

After hearing both parties, Briggs awarded Mrs. Brown damages of $177.50.

Budget guidelines calls for pay hike for state workers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State workers would get a five per cent pay hike beginning next July under budget preparation guidelines issued by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

The guidelines, presented to the state Highway Commission on Wednesday, also called for another two per cent to be set aside for merit raises for certain employes at the discretion of department directors, chief highway engineer Robert Hunter said.

The proposed pay boosts must still go through the scrutiny of the governor's budget office and then the legislature.

Bond's proposal for the year beginning next July differs from the one he made to the legislature for the current budget year. That plan called for a flat $240 a year raise for all workers and another three per cent for merit raises for certain employes. It was intended to close the gap between higher and lower paid workers in state government. The legislature ultimately adopted a plan granting all employes a flat $600 a year pay hike and another one per cent for merit raises.

The commission also approved liberalization of vacation benefits for highway department employes, bringing their policies in line with other state agencies.

Under the new plan, employes will be allowed to immediately accumulate vacation up to 30 days, or the entitlement for two year's work. Previously they had to take their 15 days vacation earned annually each year or lose it if they had not worked for the department for at least five years.

The new plan also calls for employes to earn 18 days a year vacation after 10 years service rather than 15 years and accumulate up to two years of vacation before taking it.

Employes with 15 years service would earn 21 days vacation a year instead of having to wait until serving 20 years before earning that much.

Priorities differ with candidates

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Meeting face to face for the first time, tne Republican and Democratic candidates for Missouri attorney general listed different priorities Wednesday.

John D. Ashcroft, the Republican nominee, advocated creation of a Missouri bureau of investigation, revival of the death penalty and flat prison sentences instead of indefinite terms for crimes. He said he would establish a telephone hotline so consumers could report to him when they were gypped and he would start an educational campaign among youngsters on consumer frauds.

James C. Baker, the Democrat, said the attorney general, instead of sponsoring new laws and trying to educate school children, should use laws already on the books to protect the public interest. Baker said he would concentrate on antitrust violators and help county prosecutors on difficult criminal cases. He said there are 100 unlicensed nursing homes in Missouri and the attorney general has not once this year used his authority to bring suit against them.

Appeal of campaign law is sought

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Members of the Missouri Elections Commission say they will seek an immediate appeal of a circuit court ruling declaring the state's Campaign Practices Act unconstitutional.

Frank Nutt, a member of the commission created to adminster the law, also said he believed the commission would seek a stay of Cole County Circuit Court Judge Byron Kinder's decision so it could remain in effect for the Nov. 2 general election.

"The commission long decided to appeal" if there was an adverse decision on the law, said Nutt, who was instrumental in the citizens drive for adoption of the law.

Commission chairman David Blanton, reached in St. Louis, declined to make any specific comment on the decision until he has seen it.

"I don't like to shoot from the hip on something with the immplications this has," Blanton said in referring to the most far-reaching decision issued on the law, which has been under attack since its enactment.

Earlier court decisons have dealt with only portions of the law and the state Supreme Court has already upheld the economic disclosure provisions of the statute.

Kinder declared the entire law unconstitutional Wednesday because he said it had not been properly enacted. He also overturned nine specific provisions, including the spending and contribution limits, ruling they violated state and constitutional guarantees. His ruling cited a federal decision earlier this year that threw out limits on spending in federal elections.

Candidates for the upcoming general election, Kinder said, "are excused from complying with any and all provisions " of the law and state officials are "personally enjoined from enforcing, administering or in any way compelling compliance with said chapter and from instituting criminal prosecution or civil proceedings to compel compliance with the act."

Kinder reinstated the old campaign law, which many officials have claimed was completely inadequate.

Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, whose office is charged with processing the financing and economic disclosure reports of candidates and political committees, warned that the appeal of Kinder's ruling would probably result in a stay of his decision and the law remaining in effect for the Nov. 2 general election.

"In that event, all candidates should plan to continue to comply with the present law until there has been a decision by a higher court," Kirkpatrick said.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who also comapigned for the law's passage after the state legislature failed to revise the state's old Corrupt Practices Act, said he was "deeply concerned" by the decision.

"I hope the Supreme Court will be able to hear the appeal on this case as quickly as possible so that we may have a final ruling," Bond said in a statement. He said he would continue to conduct his re-election campaign as if the law were still in effect and urged other candidates to voluntarily do the same.

Kinder's decision came in a challenge to the law originally filed on Nov. 5, 1975 by the Labor's Educational and Political Club-Independent, a group of 44 Kansas City area unions.

Kinder declared specific provisions of the law in violation of freedom of speech, equal protection and due process guarnatees of both the state and federal constitutions.

But he also said the law in effect amended the state constitution by changing the minimum qualifications for a person to hold public office. Under the law, a person failing to comply with its provisions can be denied an office even if he wins the election.

Kinder said the proposal was not submitted to voters as a constitutional amendment and therefore did not meet the mandatory requirement for amending the constitution.

As far as the individual provisions declared unconstitutional, Kinder said they were key parts of the law and "those sections of the act not declared unconstitutional herein are unenforceqable and unwarkalbe to accomplish the intent of the initiative petition and the act, and the entire act is unconstitutional, invliid and void."

Seven of the nine provisions specifically declared unconstitutional were found to be in violation of the constiutional guarantees of freedom of speech. They were:

—The spending limitations for statewide campaigns and campaigns for other public offices in the state.

CB's aid speeders

There are a lot of good reasons to buy a citizens band radio, Trooper Jerry Lathum told the Sikeston Lions Club Wednesday, but one of the worst is to use it to violate speeding laws.

Lathum told the Lions that CB reports on the location of police cars are often inaccurate, because the police are often moving about.

Having a CB helps the motorist stay awake while driving, because he listens to what is being said, Lathum said.

He said the reduced speed limit has reduced the number of serious accidents, even though most people are not traveling at 55 miles per hour.

Lathum said the average speed on the interstate highways in Southeast Missouri is about 70 miles per hour. Before the speed limit was reduced, the average speed was about 85, he added.

Lathum showed the Lions a speedgun radar unit and explained how it worked.

He said the speedgun has a range of up to five miles, although, terrain, traffic and weather generally limit its use to a much closer range.

Emergency red light is stolen

Earl McConnell, 203 Kennedy Drive, told public safety officers that an emergency red light was stolen off his van while he fought a fire Wednesday night at Holyfield Airport on Route H north of town.

McConnell is a volunteer fireman. The theft occurred between 8 and 9:30 p.m.

The red light was valued at $35.

St. Louis man injured

HOWARDVILLE — A St. Louis man was seriously injured Wednesday night in a single-vehicle accident near here on Interstate 55.

The highway patrol said the accident occurred .2 mile south of town at 11:40 p.m. when a northbound car driven by Francis Joseph Heeney, 60, of St. Louis ran off the road into the median and traveled approximately one-fourth mile before striking a maintenance crossover embankment.

Thieves hit Morley, Oran

BENTON — Thefts of $20 from a service station and a pickup truck occurred in the Morley-Oran area Wednesday night, the Scott County Sheriff's Department reported this morning.

A break-in at Gillie's service station in Morley was reported at 7:09 a.m. today. Approximately $20 was taken from a cash register.

Charles W. Taylor of Oran Route One reported at 6:22 a.m. today that his 1973 pickup truck had been stolen sometime during the night.

The sheriff's department is investigating both incidents.

First Small Claims case is heard

BENTON — The first suit to be heard in the newly formed Small Claims Court was heard Wednesday by Scott County Magistrate Lloyd G. Briggs.

The suit, filed Aug. 26 by Hilda Brown of Illmo against Bob Hensley of Scott City, asked $355 for damages to her car.

After hearing both parties, Briggs awarded Mrs. Brown damages of $177.50.

Proposed new regulation

Insurance policies to have explanatory information

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — How well do you understand your life insurance policy? Do you know the difference between whole life and term life insurance, or mutual and stock life insurance companies?

If you're like most Missourians, the state Division of Insurance says, you're unsure about what you're buying when you agree to purchase life insurance. In an effort to better inform the insurance customer, the division has proposed a regulation requiring the 530 life insurance companies operating in the state to include with their policies explanatory information on them.

The proposed regulation met with varying reaction Wednesday during a public hearing attended by some 65 insurance company representatives. Two large compnay representatives said there firms were ready to comply with the rule, while a Missouri insurance association spokesman voiced opposition to it.

The stated purpose of the regulation is to "improve the buyer's ability to select the most appropriate plan of life insurance for his needs, improve the buyer's understanding of the ... policy ... and improve the ability of the buyer to evaluate the relative costs of similar plans of life insurance."

A policy summary and buyer's guide would have to be provided to each customer or potential customer. The summary would contain information explaining the policy, and include such information as the cost of annual premiums, guaranteed amounts payable upon death, total guaranteed cash surrender values, cash dividends available and other information. The buyer's guide, which has been prepared by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, defines terms used in the policy statements and explains the various kinds of insurance.

"Our real concern is that the consumer cannot make a decision on whathe's buying," said H.W. Edmiston, division director.

The division's life supervisor, Carl Barnes, said inaction on the part of the state could result in the federal government establishing a regulation of its own.

John Britton, a Jfferson City lobbyist representing the Missouri Association of Life Underwriters, opposed the regulation, saying the threat of a federal rule was no reason to approve one in Missouri.

Schorr may not be charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television newsman Daniel Schorr apparently will not be charged with contempt of Congress for his refusal to name the person who supplied him with the House intelligence report.

Nine times during Schorr's sworn testimony Wednesday, Ethics Committee Chairman John J. Flynt Jr., D-Ga., warned him that he could be held in contempt of Congress and be jailed or fined if he refused to identify his source and answer other questions about the source.

Nine times, Schorr refused.

After the hearing, an informal poll of the members showed that six of the 12 committee members opposed any attempt to cite Schorr for contempt and two others either leaned that way or were uncertain. This means any contempt resolution apparently would fail by at least a tie vote.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., who had led the move to subpoena Schorr, said he leaned against a contempt citation. "I never intended in the first place that this would send him to prison," Bennett said. "This was a step to let him give his views and he did that."

But others who had voted to subpoena Schorr were opposed to holding him in contempt, including Rep. Donald J. Mitchell, R-N.Y. Mitchell said he wanted to prevent a constitutional confrontation over the issue.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who had opposed summoning Schorr, said he didn't think contempt action would even be proposed in committee. For all practical purposes, he said, Schorr's testimony has ended the committee's $150,000, five-month attempt to locate Schorr's source.

The committee still must prepare a report to the House on its search for the leaker and on its recommendations for improving security measures for committees dealing with sensitive subjects.

Both Schorr and committee members have said the hearing constituted a showdown over the constitutional rights of Congress to investigate and guard its materials versus the rights of a free press to gather and report the news.

Sikeston leads North stat race

Early season statistics compiled after two games show Sikeston athletes leading the numbers parade in the Northern Division and players from three different teams leading in the Southern Division.

In the rushing race, Sikeston workhorses James Wilder and Paul Bean are waging a one-two race for the Northern Division lead, with Wilder holding a 41-yard lead over his teammate. Danny Johnson of East Prairie, already nearing the halfway mark to the magic 1,000-yard mark, is miles ahead of everyone else in the South with 431 yards.

Sikeston's David Shell is the leader in passing yardage in the Northern Division, although Kennett's Joe Bartmess has a better completion percentage. In the South, Hunt of Doniphan is the leader.

Bulldog flanker Paul Gilbow is tied with Scott McKeel of Kennett for the lead in the receiving department in the North with four catches each. Kevin Meek of Caruthersville caught nine passes in the Tigers' only game of the season to lead the South.

Bean and Wilder of Sikeston lead the North in scoring with fourteen points each. Danny Johnson is the Southern Division leader with twelve.

These statistics do not include teams of coaches who did not mail in their statistics. We are sure that several outstanding performances have been overlooked, but we cannot report their statistics if they are not reported to us. There are many fine athletes who may go unrecognized if their coaches do not report their figures.

SHS opens volleyball play tonight

The fourth season of Sikeston High School volleyball begins tonight at the fieldhouse with the Bulldogs taking on Matthews in the season opener.

SHS coach Janie Merrick has seven returning varsity lettermen coming back this year from last season's 4-8 squad that compiled the best record yet in the young history over the program. Five of the returnees are seniors -- Pam Weddington, Pam Gregory, Judy O'Neal, Kim Williams and Debbie Matthews. Also returning are two juniors -- Patty Holt and Barbara Marsh.

"We should be a lot better this year," said coach Merrick, indicating that experience would help her squad. "We only had two girls who could spike last year, but we have about five this year."

There are now eleven matches on schedule, although an attempt is being made to round out the schedule to the maximum 14 games.

Frosh play first game this evening

A talented group of athletes who finished the season undefeated last year as eighth graders open their 1976 freshman football season tonight as they host the Jackson Indian frosh. Kickoff time at Public School Stadium is 7:00 p.m.

There are 48 players out for the freshman team this year. Coaching the ninth graders again this season will be George Hale and Martin Bass.

Sikeston has not beaten Jackson in freshman football in recent yeras, but Hale is optimistic about the team's chances this season. "If we don't beat them with this bunch, we never will," Hale said about his players.

Sikeston leads North stat race

Early season statistics compiled after two games show Sikeston athletes leading the numbers parade in the Northern Division and players from three different teams leading in the Southern Division.

In the rushing race, Sikeston workhorses James Wilder and Paul Bean are waging a one-two race for the Northern Division lead, with Wilder holding a 41-yard lead over his teammate. Danny Johnson of East Prairie, already nearing the halfway mark to the magic 1,000-yard mark, is miles ahead of everyone else in the South with 431 yards.

Sikeston's David Shell is the leader in passing yardage in the Northern Division, although Kennett's Joe Bartmess has a better completion percentage. In the South, Hunt of Doniphan is the leader.

Bulldog flanker Paul Gilbow is tied with Scott McKeel of Kennett for the lead in the receiving department in the North with four catches each. Kevin Meek of Caruthersville caught nine passes in the Tigers' only game of the season to lead the South.

Bean and Wilder of Sikeston lead the North in scoring with fourteen points each. Danny Johnson is the Southern Division leader with twelve.

Six move to zone competition heat

Six Sikestonians will advance to zone competition at Central High School in Cape Girardeau at 10:00 a.m. September 25, in the annual Punt, Pass, and Kick competition which was sponsored locally this year by the Sikeston Jaycees and Sikeston Motor Company.

Forty-six boys competed this year in the local competition held last Saturday at the Sikeston Middle School. Last year the competition was not held until October but this year it was moved up one month.

The class of competition was in each age bracket from eight years through thirteen years of age. The local winners will be honored by the Jaycees and Sikeston Motor Company Sept. 28, 1976 with a dinner at the Country Club.

The first place winners in the zone competition held at Cape will advance to the District Championships which this year will be held at Shaw's Park in Clayton on Oct. 9.

Winners in the eight year-old category were: Bob Crowley, First; William Kyle, Second; and Jeff Green, Third.

Eleven year-old winners were: Pat Curry, First; Timothy Brashear, Second; and Jay Presley, Third.

The thirteen year-old category has Gerald Buchanan finishing first and Kevin Boyer, second and Jeffrey Lee Brashear taking third.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

LUBBOCK, Tex. — Texas Tech linebacker Thomas Howard, who intercepted two passes, made 11 solo tackles and assisted on six others in Tech's 24-7 thrashing of Colorado State, was named the Associated Press Lineman of the Week.

Curtis & Denny hurl Cards to doubleheader sweep of Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — John Curtis saw Manager Red Schoendienst walking out of the St. Louis Cardinal dugout and thought he'd had it.

"Most of the time when Red comes out, you're out of the game," said the Cardinal southpaw. "I slammed the ball in the glove and said to myself, 'Don't take me out.'"

Fortunately for Curtis, catcher Ted Simmons talked Schoendienst out of lifting the St. Louis starter, allowing him to complete a 4-1 victory over the New York Mets Wednesday night that capped a doubleheader sweep. The Cardinals won the opener 7-0 behind John Denny's four-hitter.

"Simmons told Schoendienst I still had it more or less," Curtis related. "But I was sure the next hitter was my last man if I lost him."

Curtis finished with a six-hitter for only his third complete game in 14 starts.

"I had a big curve tonight and, after a while, the hitters were looking for it," said Curtis. "But even though they were laying back for the curve, I still got them out with it."

The Mets have not only had problems hitting curves of late, but just about everything else.

"We just weren't hitting," said Manager Joe Frazier after watching his players collect only 10 hits in the two games. "We looked terrible, if you want to know the truth about it."

Denny, 10-7, backed by Joe Ferguson's grand slam homer, pitched his third shutout in the opener before Curtis, 6-9, came back to stifle the Mets in the nightcap.

The Cardinals had a big third inning in each game, scoring four runs in the third of the opener and three in the second game.

Ferguson, who entered the game in a 2-for-31 slump, walloped his 10th homer of the season after the Cardinals had loaded the bases in the third inning of the opener on a base hit by Denny and two walks by Met starter Mickey Lolich, 8-13.

In addition to his homer, Ferguson also knocked in a fifth run with a single. Mike Anderson also homered for the Cardinals in the first game.

Six move to zone competition heat

Six Sikestonians will advance to zone competition at Central High School in Cape Girardeau at 10:00 a.m. September 25, in the annual Punt, Pass, and Kick competition which was sponsored locally this year by the Sikeston Jaycees and Sikeston Motor Company.

Forty-six boys competed this year in the local competition held last Saturday at the Sikeston Middle School. Last year the competition was not held until October but this year it was moved up one month.

The class of competition was in each age bracket from eight years through thirteen years of age. The local winners will be honored by the Jaycees and Sikeston Motor Company Sept. 28, 1976 with a dinner at the Country Club.

The first place winners in the zone competition held at Cape will advance to the District Championships which this year will be held at Shaw's Park in Clayton on Oct. 9.

Winners in the eight year-old category were: Bob Crowley, First; William Kyle, Second; and Jeff Green, Third.

Eleven year-old winners were: Pat Curry, First; Timothy Brashear, Second; and Jay Presley, Third.

The thirteen year-old category has Gerald Buchanan finishing first and Kevin Boyer, second and Jeffrey Lee Brashear taking third.

Curtis & Denny hurl Cards to doubleheader sweep of Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — John Curtis saw Manager Red Schoendienst walking out of the St. Louis Cardinal dugout and thought he'd had it.

"Most of the time when Red comes out, you're out of the game," said the Cardinal southpaw. "I slammed the ball in the glove and said to myself, 'Don't take me out.'"

Fortunately for Curtis, catcher Ted Simmons talked Schoendienst out of lifting the St. Louis starter, allowing him to complete a 4-1 victory over the New York Mets Wednesday night that capped a doubleheader sweep. The Cardinals won the opener 7-0 behind John Denny's four-hitter.

"Simmons told Schoendienst I still had it more or less," Curtis related. "But I was sure the next hitter was my last man if I lost him."

Curtis finished with a six-hitter for only his third complete game in 14 starts.

"I had a big curve tonight and, after a while, the hitters were looking for it," said Curtis. "But even though they were laying back for the curve, I still got them out with it."

The Mets have not only had problems hitting curves of late, but just about everything else.

"We just weren't hitting," said Manager Joe Frazier after watching his players collect only 10 hits in the two games. "We looked terrible, if you want to know the truth about it."

Denny, 10-7, backed by Joe Ferguson's grand slam homer, pitched his third shutout in the opener before Curtis, 6-9, came back to stifle the Mets in the nightcap.

The Cardinals had a big third inning in each game, scoring four runs in the third of the opener and three in the second game.

Ferguson, who entered the game in a 2-for-31 slump, walloped his 10th homer of the season after the Cardinals had loaded the bases in the third inning of the opener on a base hit by Denny and two walks by Met starter Mickey Lolich, 8-13.

In addition to his homer, Ferguson also knocked in a fifth run with a single. Mike Anderson also homered for the Cardinals in the first game.

Oakland gains on Kansas City; A's now only 3½ behind Royals

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's are running wild and the Kansas City Royals are running scared, which makes for an exciting division race in the American League West.

The Royals are the front runners, sitting on the pace since May 18, but Oakland is closing fast. The A's, Western Division champions the past five years, haven't held first place since the third day of the season but today find themselves just 3½ games off the lead.

While the Royals have lost 13 of their last 18 games, squandering a 9½-game bulge, the A's have won 11 of 18. Wednesday night, the A's rallied for five runs in the eighth inning to beat Minnesota 5-2. Meanwhile, California scored in the ninth to edge Kansas City 2-1.

"We've played recklessly all year but now we're afraid to challenge the other team," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog. "Maybe that's what a little pressure will do to you."

Pinch-hitter Tommy Davis stroked a bases-loaded ninth-inning single off reliever Mark Littell to trip the Royals. Nolan Ryan, 14-17, scattered six hits to win his fourth straight game. He struck out nine and walked four.

The A's are applying pressure on Kansas City and all the catchers in the AL. Down 2-0 in the eighth, the A's stole four bases in the inning to build their game-winning rally.

"We still had six outs so I felt we had a chance," said Oakland Manager Chuck Tanner. "Baseball is not a game where the clock runs out on you.

"The pinch runners won it for us," he said. "Half of our victories this season can be attributed to running."

The A's had only three hits through seven innings off Jim Hughes, whose troubles began with a one-out walk in the eighth to Gene Tenace.

Bill North singled and Claudell Washington was hit by a pitch before Don Baylor stroked a tiebreaking two-run single. Washington then stole home for the final run of the inning.

Team Canada wins series over Czechs

MONTREAL (AP) — The scenario of a dressing room after a championship victory: the release of emotions pent up for weeks of training and tournament competition.

There sat Bobby Clarke, thrilled to have won the Canada Cup but happy to be going home. His children have just started school, "and this running around and skating and stuff doesn't mean anything to them. They want to know when I'm coming home."

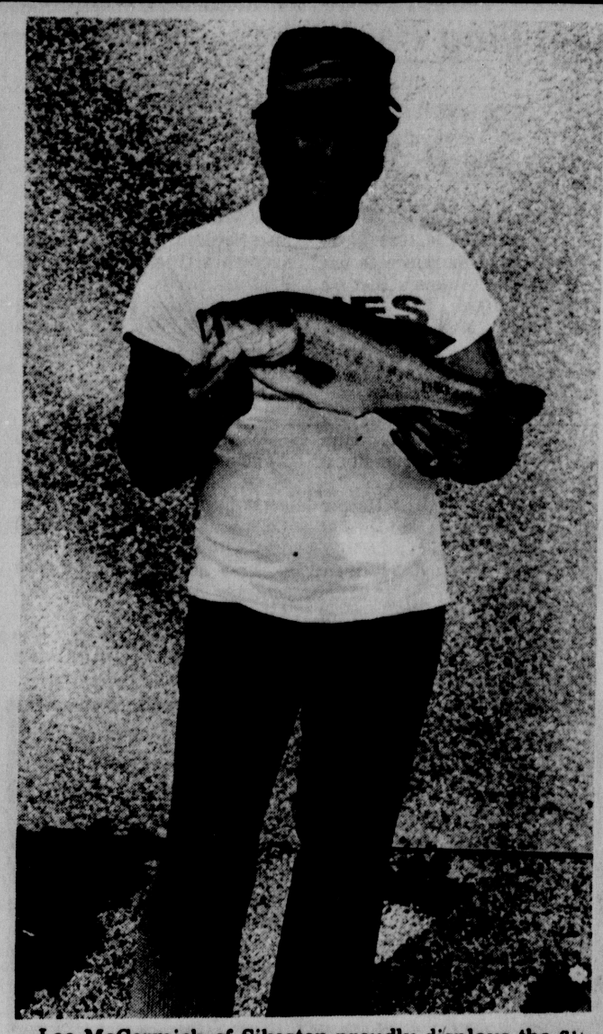
There sat Phil Esposito, saying that winning the Canada Cup is different from winning the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup because, "for one thing, we have to start playing all over again in training camp on Saturday. If you win the Stanley Cup, you get four months off to relax."

There stood Danny Gare, amidst the sprays of champagne and the tired, sweaty hockey players congratulating each other on winning the first championship of the six-nation ice hockey tournament. "Though I only played five or six shifts in the whole series," he said, "I'm happy for the guys.

"They worked for it: doing roadwork up a mountain in the mornings before the tournament, working so hard together on the ice, being together off it. It's a unique thing, guys from different teams coming together for one thing: to play for their country."

They made their country proud Wednesday night, using Darryl Sittler's goal at 11:33 of overtime to beat the determined Czechs 5-4 and sweep the best-of-three playoff after winning the round-robin phase of the competition.

"I don't think you're ever going to see a team as great as this again," said Marcel Dionne, whose pass was converted by Sittler into the game-winning goal of the frenzied playoff-pitch contest.



Leo McCormick of Sikeston proudly displays the 6¼-pound largemouth bass he caught early Wednesday morning while fishing in St. Johns ditch in Sikeston. The fish was caught with a minnow. (Daily Standard photo)

Busch to ask for $3.4 million

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinal president August A. Busch Jr. says he will ask the team's board of directors for "an unlimited amount — up to $3 million or $4 million" to bid for players in baseball's free-agent market.

"I'm going to be the highest bidder without question if the board passes my recommendation," Busch said Tuesday night.

The 77-year-old brewery owner said he will seek the money from the board at a meeting next week.

There are about 25 unsigned players who, if they do not sign contracts with their present clubs, would be available this fall. The major leagues will hold their first re-entry draft for those players Nov. 4.

Busch said the Cardinals want a right-handed power hitter and a right-handed relief pitcher "who could bring the Cardinals the pennant."

Although he would not mention which players he had in mind, Busch replied when the names of outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers of the Oakland A's were mentioned, "You're coming awfully close."

Cardinal general manager Bing Devine said that as of now, under the draft rules, the Cardinals could sign no more than two of the available free agents.

Big 8 teams to face challenges

By The Associated Press

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said Wednesday he and his Sooners were in the "best mental frame of mind we've been in in a long time."

With the exception of Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley, however, other coaches were less optomistic in looking forward to Saturday's games.

The fourth-ranked Sooners will have the help of defensive tackle Paul Tabor when they go against California Saturday. He missed the opener against Vanderbilt. Switzer said California's Joe Roth would be the best quarterback they would face all year.

Stanley was pleased with his team's "sharpness and quickness" in practice Wednesday as they prepared for Saturday's game at Arkansas. Free Safety Gary Irions and offensive guard Craig Simmons were reported ready to start after recovering from minor injuries.

At Nebraska, Coach Tom Osborne said he and his Cornhuskers could be "fighting for our lives down to the end" if they make critical mistakes at Indiana Saturday. Osborne did allow some cautious optimism. He said if the Huskers "score two or tree touchdowns early" they could have a repeat of their 45-0 victory last year.

At Missouri, Coach Al Onofrio said fullback Rich Dansdill would probably not play Saturday against Illinois. "He still isn't ready at all," Onofrio said.

Oakland gains on Kansas City; A's now only 3½ behind Royals

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's are running wild and the Kansas City Royals are running scared, which makes for an exciting division race in the American League West.

The Royals are the front runners, sitting on the pace since May 18, but Oakland is closing fast. The A's, Western Division champions the past five years, haven't held first place since the third day of the season but today find themselves just 3½ games off the lead.

While the Royals have lost 13 of their last 18 games, squandering a 9½-game bulge, the A's have won 11 of 18. Wednesday night, the A's rallied for five runs in the eighth inning to beat Minnesota 5-2. Meanwhile, California scored in the ninth to edge Kansas City 2-1.

Dr. Lamb

Some help for osteoporosis

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was enlightened by your column on "Porous bones in women." I suffer from osteoporosis of the spine and am interested in learning what proportions of sodium fluoride, calcium and vitamin D I should take daily. Would it be possible for you to inform me what you consider a reasonable dosage? I am 61 years old and am recuperating from a bad attack of sciatica.

I have never taken calcium and do not enjoy milk. I plan to start taking calcium tablets immediately. Lately I have been reading articles on nutrition and realize as a nation we do not pay enough attention to our diets.

DEAR READER — You should see your doctor about what you should take for your own individual case. There is a lot to the proper management of a person with dissolving bones (osteoporosis).

The Mayo Clinic reported good success using daily a combination of 50 milligrams of sodium fluoride and 600 to 1000 milligrams of calcium carbonate or gluconate supplement plus 50,000 units of vitamin D twice a week. This was reported in Postgraduate Medicine, October 1972 and Modern Medicine, March 5, 1973, in case your doctor is interested in my source for a reference.

And, I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis, to give you more information on this common problem. Others who want this issue can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Just what is a varicose vein and is it true that jogging causes this?

DEAR READER — Sorry, you are getting the benefits of an article from Playboy magazine that I disagree with entirely.

Varicose veins are dilated veins, usually of the legs commonly seen in women after pregnancy. Normally there are small valves inside the leg veins to make the venous blood all flow one way, up toward the heart. When the veins dilate and overstretch the valves don't work. The veins become nonfunctioning sacks, like overstretched balloons, and when a person is on his feet they are full of stagnant blood.

Entertainment briefs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson will celebrate 14 years of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" on Oct. 1 with a medley of scenes from memorable shows.

Among the guests being spotlighted: Ed Ames, Robert Blake, Steve Lawrence, Burt Reynolds, Don Rickles, Jack Webb. Carson made his debut Oct. 1, 1962. Ed McMahon was his announcer, and Doc Severison was a member of the band. He came musical director Oct. 9, 1967.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erica Jong, author of "Fear of Flying," and Jon Fast, son of author Howard Fast, have sold Universal Pictures a "bold contemporary love story" titled "Capri."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More "Columbos" for Peter Falk. The Emmy winner, who said earlier that he wouldn't return to his series, is now filming a new chapter, "An Old Fashioned Murder." He has agreed to make two more this season.

What's the law?

Case of the persistent victim

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Al was a taxi driver with a predilection for accidents. If he had one while sound asleep in bed, it would have surprised no one, not even his nervous boss.

And, oddly enough, the accidents were never Al's fault. But while he always had presence of mind, absence of body would have been better, since he never missed getting hurt. The result: Al's boss finally fired him.

"You're a great guy," his boss apologized. "You're hard-working, you're bright and you don't goof off. But this just can't go on. With your knack for getting into accidents, one day you're going to get killed and I'm going to lose my business."

"Sorry, Bud," he was told, "but you were fired. Anyone who's fired for cause isn't entitled to unemployment benefits."

"I wasn't fired because I didn't do my job," protested Al. "I was fired so that my boss could have some peace of mind. He worried about me. He also worried about having to pay all my bills at local hospitals."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit accident-prone Al to collect unemployment benefits?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a person is not disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits unless he is unemployed due to willfulness or misconduct, which does not include carelessness. In this case, concluded the judge, Al was fired because he was accident-prone and not because of any willful act or misconduct on his part.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was enlightened by your column on "Porous bones in women." I suffer from osteoporosis of the spine and am interested in learning what proportions of sodium fluoride, calcium and vitamin D I should take daily. Would it be possible for you to inform me what you consider a reasonable dosage? I am 61 years old and am recuperating from a bad attack of sciatica.

I have never taken calcium and do not enjoy milk. I plan to start taking calcium tablets immediately. Lately I have been reading articles on nutrition and realize as a nation we do not pay enough attention to our diets.

DEAR READER — You should see your doctor about what you should take for your own individual case. There is a lot to the proper management of a person with dissolving bones (osteoporosis).

The Mayo Clinic reported good success using daily a combination of 50 milligrams of sodium fluoride and 600 to 1000 milligrams of calcium carbonate or gluconate supplement plus 50,000 units of vitamin D twice a week. This was reported in Postgraduate Medicine, October 1972 and Modern Medicine, March 5, 1973, in case your doctor is interested in my source for a reference.

And, I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis, to give you more information on this common problem. Others who want this issue can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Just what is a varicose vein and is it true that jogging causes this?

DEAR READER — Sorry, you are getting the benefits of an article from Playboy magazine that I disagree with entirely.

Varicose veins are dilated veins, usually of the legs commonly seen in women after pregnancy. Normally there are small valves inside the leg veins to make the venous blood all flow one way, up toward the heart. When the veins dilate and overstretch the valves don't work. The veins become nonfunctioning sacks, like overstretched balloons, and when a person is on his feet they are full of stagnant blood.

Entertainment briefs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson will celebrate 14 years of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" on Oct. 1 with a medley of scenes from memorable shows.

Among the guests being spotlighted: Ed Ames, Robert Blake, Steve Lawrence, Burt Reynolds, Don Rickles, Jack Webb. Carson made his debut Oct. 1, 1962. Ed McMahon was his announcer, and Doc Severison was a member of the band. He came musical director Oct. 9, 1967.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erica Jong, author of "Fear of Flying," and Jon Fast, son of author Howard Fast, have sold Universal Pictures a "bold contemporary love story" titled "Capri."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More "Columbos" for Peter Falk. The Emmy winner, who said earlier that he wouldn't return to his series, is now filming a new chapter, "An Old Fashioned Murder." He has agreed to make two more this season.

What's the law?

Case of the persistent victim

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Al was a taxi driver with a predilection for accidents. If he had one while sound asleep in bed, it would have surprised no one, not even his nervous boss.

And, oddly enough, the accidents were never Al's fault. But while he always had presence of mind, absence of body would have been better, since he never missed getting hurt. The result: Al's boss finally fired him.

"You're a great guy," his boss apologized. "You're hard-working, you're bright and you don't goof off. But this just can't go on. With your knack for getting into accidents, one day you're going to get killed and I'm going to lose my business."

"Sorry, Bud," he was told, "but you were fired. Anyone who's fired for cause isn't entitled to unemployment benefits."

"I wasn't fired because I didn't do my job," protested Al. "I was fired so that my boss could have some peace of mind. He worried about me. He also worried about having to pay all my bills at local hospitals."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit accident-prone Al to collect unemployment benefits?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that a person is not disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits unless he is unemployed due to willfulness or misconduct, which does not include carelessness. In this case, concluded the judge, Al was fired because he was accident-prone and not because of any willful act or misconduct on his part.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 16th, the 260th day of 1976. There are 106 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Selective Service Act, which set up the first peacetime military draft in the nation's history.

On this date:

In 1630, the village of Shawmut, Massachusetts, changed its name to Boston.

In 1638, the future French king, Louis XIV, was born.

In 1862, the Civil War battle of Antietam began in Maryland.

In 1945, after World War II, Japan surrendered Hong Kong to the British.

Five years ago: It was announced that "Look" magazine would cease publication, blaming increased postal and other costs and declining advertising revenue.

One year ago: Members of the United Federation of Teachers voted to end a 10-day teachers' strike in New York City.

Thought for today: Good food is the only sensual treat that can be enjoyed three times a day for a lifetime. — Columnist William Buckley.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, American and British troops fought the battle of Harlem Heights, New York.

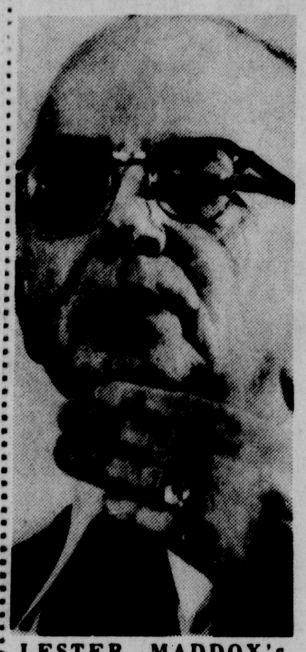
ROSALYNN CARTER, who favors decriminalization but not legalization of marijuana, says her three grown sons have smoked marijuana — "they told me they did." The wife of the Democratic presidential nominee said her only worry about her children would be "if I thought they were slipping around and doing it and not letting me know about it."



LESTER MADDOX's nomination as its presidential candidate may have set back the American Independent party as a valid conservative alternative to the Republican party, some party members are reported to believe. They do not expect the Maddox candidacy to draw off significant numbers of conservative Republican voters.

ROSALYNN CARTER, who favors decriminalization but not legalization of marijuana, says her three grown sons have smoked marijuana — "they told me they did." The wife of the Democratic presidential nominee said her only worry about her children would be "if I thought they were slipping around and doing it and not letting me know about it."

LESTER MADDOX's nomination as its presidential candidate may have set back the American Independent party as a valid conservative alternative to the Republican party, some party members are reported to believe. They do not expect the Maddox candidacy to draw off significant numbers of conservative Republican voters.
